The Only Antidote

THE announcement that a national organization, headed by Professor Morris R. Cohen, the famous philosopher, has been formed for the purpose of com-batting anti-semitism by facts and the proper interpretation of facts, will be welcomed by all thoughtful and peace-loving peo-ple. Thorough and scientific investigations into the causes of anti-semitism in various lands, anti-semitism in various lands, authoritative exposures of the fab-rications disseminated by the "ideologists" of Jew-baiting along religious, racial, economic and political lines, will do more to check the epidemic of anti-semitism than mere denunciation and condemnation of the disease. The authentic materials prepared by the new organization will be made available to the various existing organizations engaged in defending the rights of the lewish people wherever such rights are violated. Facts and the scientific analysis of facts constitute the only effective wearon against the sinister propaganda of anti-Jewish hate that is being circu-lated by Hitler's Germany throughout the world.

A Fighting Pacifist

A FIGHTING PROCIFIST

BRAHAM I. SHPLACOFF,

Socialist labor leader, Zionist, pacifist, is dead. He will be mourned by the 'aboring masses and by American liberals and radicals, for he was a sincere, indefatigable champion of their radice. He was courseene at a cause. He was courageous at a time when chauvinism and jingo-ism prevailed, when it was dangerous to be a pacifist. He fought for the abolition of chi'd labor, for the prohibition of the "third degree," for the elimination of the unspeakable sweat shop conditions. He was wholeheartedly interested in the amelioration of the lot of the working people. He devoted himself genuinely to humane efforts in behalf of the distressed and needy among the poorest of the poor. At first in-different to Zionism, he became an ardent advocate of the movement after the war, and after his visit to Palestine, where he was deeply impressed with the was deeply impressed with the achievements of the labor organ-ization, and where he was in-spired by the constructive work of the Jewish pioneers. A man of vision and high ideals, a fight-ing pacifist, Shiplacoff was at the same time one of the gentlest of humanitarians

The Practical Visionary

THE project to build a colony in Palestine in honor of Men-cham Mendel Uss'schkin, an-nounced by Jewish National Fund nounced by Jewish National Fund of America, will meet with wide-spread approval among all Jews interested in the upbuilding of Palestine. Loss of Rights Their Only Alternative, Special Correspondent Finds as Government Seeks Support

(By Special Correspondent Jewish Telegraphic Agency)

VIENNA, Feb. 8 .- Two hundred and twenty-five thousand Jews living in Austin are confronted today with a crisis which may cost them not only their civil and political rights but, in many parts of this now turbulant country, their lives as well. Their fate hangs on the outcome of the struggle being bitterly waged between the Dollfuss regime and its shifting allies on the one side, and the Austrian Nazis with the backing of Germany, on the other.

Jewish circles are watching with gravest anxiety and alarm the developments in the fight which Chancellor Engelbert Dolffwas temendously waging against the Nazis, fearing that if the Nazis obtain power through revolution, Jewish heads will roll in revenge for the stubborn support all Austrian Jewys has given to Dolffwas.

Nazi Organ Hits Deutsche Ring

Zeitung Grumbles for Failure of German Group to Say 'Heil'

In the current issue of the "Deutsche Zeitung," organ of the Nazi organization in the United States, issue is taken with the New Yorker States-Zeitung and non-Hillerized members of the German community, who celebrated at a benefit affair for the Deutsche Ring two weeks ago.

The article declares that the swatchte which was executed in the swastika, which was used in the decoration scheme of the Central Opera House, was sullied by the nature of the program, which entirely neglected to mention the improvements made by Adolf Hitler in New Germany.

Trouble brewing for many months between the Friends of New Germany and the publishers of the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung gained expression in the article, which voiced outright resentment against the fact that 2,000 Ger-man Americans filling the hall could so completely ignore Hitler. There were no Nazi anthems, no Hitler Hailing, no anti-Semitic utterances at the celebration, and some of the compositions rendered by the artists were of German Jewish origin.

'Nazis' Fight for Western Civilization' A Subtle Attempt to Deceive and Mislead

(This is the first of two articles by Mr. Fischer in which anti-Semitic allegations contained in Semitre dilegations communed in "Germany's Fight for Western Civilization," the pamphlet which Nazi agents are attempting to smuggle into this country, we systematically refuted.)

I have before me a pamphlèt in the English language, bearing the title, "Germany's Fight for West-ern Civilization." It is issued by the lie factory of the propaganda firm of Herr Goebbels and Com-pany, and is full of base, un-founded lies. The concoction bears the truly "Aryan" signature of one Jamrowski as responsible editor. This, one must admit, technically perfect compilation of misrepresentations is being circulated in hundreds of thousands of copies by Hitler's agents. The object of this pamphlet is quite transpar-ent—it is intended to represent Hitler as the saviour of the entire world from the peril of "Jewish-Marxian" Bolshevism and to im-press all the simple and primitive-press all the simple and primitivepress all the simple and primitivepress an the simple and primitive-minded, who are permeated with the dread of Communism, with the all-important part the "Aryan" dictator has played in averting the danger. The honorable Herr Jam-rowski's thesis may be summed up as follows: In Prussia, ruled by the Socialists, the "Communist-Je 'sh" peril reached such an acute stage early in 1933, that Germany had no other choice than between Hitler and Moscow.

One glance at the picture on Page 31 of this pack of lies will suffice to see at once what un-scrupulous and stupid methods are being used to deceive and befud-dle credulous people. The following caption appears under the pic-ture: "The Jewish Communist Member of the Reichstag, Hans Kipperberger, the intellectual author of the execrable murder of the police officers on the Bulow Platz in Berlin, in 1931."

The Real Matter Outside of the fact that Kipperperger has no more to do with Jewry than Einstein with Hitler, this lie becomes even more grotesque when one recalls that the matter has in reality to do with the sanctioning by Severing, the Prussian Socialist Minister of the drastic measures taken by Socialist Socialist Chief of Police, Zoergiebel, in dispersing the Com-munist First of May demonstra-

a passionate ngnter against Bushevism, was a man who never allowed his partisan interests to interfere with his sense of justice. As organizer of lay schools which had no affiliation with Judaism, he tion. And who was it that took up the culgels on behalf of the Communist Party? None other than Herr Gobels' "Angriff" which came out with big headlines depaying Savering as "resolved severed, of course, all connections with Jewish Parochial institutions. Whoever visited Loewenstein's Children's Republic where thousdenouncing Severing as ands of proletarian boys and girls were made happy all summer long assassin.

This in itself should be sufficient to brand the entire Ruich propa-ganda as a barrage of base, filthy lies. Gothein, a high State official ganda as a barrage or pase, many lies. Gothein, a high State official in Berlin, once said; "Statistics are like a fickle wench—on; can do or prove anything by statistical data." Any wonder, then, that Jamrowski-Goebbels and Company becloud the minds of the victims with their so-called statistical fig-aisatic over this labor of love and peace. The camp song quoted on Page 30 of the compliation of lies is a mean fabrication. Wheever dared sing "When the blood of Nazis drips from the daggers, happy times will come," would have hear available from the despress. How was it possible, since the war, for "good, old Prussian of Frederick the Great" to become a hot-bed of Jewish Bolshevism But here, too, statistics may be of assistance. Thus, on Page 5 we read: "Jewish immigration after the war. Of the 404,000 Jews demiciled in Prussia in 1925, 76,000 were aliens." Every figure, every were aliens." Every figure, every word is a lie, nothing but a lie. Now, what is the truth?

The Ludendorff Invitation

Prior to the war, some 45,000 East-European Jews were living in Germany, During the war a number of East-European Jews came to their "friends" in Germany, following the appeal by General Ludendorff to the Jews in Poland in which he promised them "equal rights" in the Fatherland. In 1933 there were, at most, 55,000 East-European Jews in all of Germany. In an official reply to an inquiry in the Prussian Diet early in 1930, the Prussian Minister of the Interior, stated:

"Since 1919, 107,599 aliens have been domiciled in Prussia, of whom 96,864 were of German extraction, with but 7,654 foreigners from Eastern Europe being persons of non-German descent."

As we look at the picture printed in "evidence" of the allegation that the East-European immigration brought Bolshevism to Prussia, we can size up the veritable witches cauldron of Nazi propaganda of ties and filth

VI. THE LABELING OF GERMAN GOODS

(This is the sixth of a series of marticles by Mr. Chaithin, well-known New York atterney, on the vice effects of the anti-Nazi boy-root in the United States and else-large the United States and else-large are especiall welcome on the Chait of the Chait of the Language of the Chait of the C where.)

The zeal with which the Nazis outside the Reich's borders apply themselves to the display of the swastika is in curious contrast with their diffidence in exposing country's name on their We hear of the hooked wares. cross desecrating synagogue walls in Eastern Europe, of near-riots it has provoked at public meetings in England, of the German am-basador's refusal to ...peak at Gerbasador's retusal to lipeak at Ger-mantown, Philadelphia, because the display of thetribal totem is denied him. And yet we discover (by visiting our favorite Jewish-owned department store): That those gloves on the barcounters have the word nany" in faint letters hid-'Germany' ing sheepishly in the inner depths, coming to light only when we turn the fingers inside out. That the black lacquered cigarette box which we so trustingly ordered delivered to our non-Aryan home actually requires inspection by actually requires inspection by means of a magnifying glass bemeans of a magnifying glass pe-fore it reluctantly yields the sec-ret of its origin. The tiny word "Germany" is so cunningly em-bossed in the metal as possibly to be felt by the sense of touch, but never, never to be gazed upon by never, never to be gazed upon by the naked eye.

And as if this modesty were not enough, we find the German ex-porters exhibiting another trait unique in the totalitarium tate a seditious separatism, a love of the locality where the goods were made, a tenderness for the old states which the Leader has wiped out with a single word. In-stead of proudly proclaiming the name of awakened Germany (which had once been defiled by it association with mich names Mendelssohn and Heine and Rathe nau and Einstein but now, thank n, has been storilized by the Wotan, has been stormed by the exclusive patented Barb-Aryan Grandmother process), the toys bags and dishes persistently refer to the hunting old names of Saxony, Bavaria, Wurttenberg, Bathe law? The Tariff Act does not mince one year, or both It is apparent that the require-ment as to legibility of the labelug has teeth in it. Nor is efficien legal machinery lacking to set th law in motion. Hard-working in-spectors are attached to the office of each customs district, and any evidence uncovered by them is handled courteously and promptly, and are especiall welcome in these days when the revenue de-rived from the additional tarifi-duty would help balance emergency relief expenditures. The sole explanation for the widespread violations and evasions of labeling law, with respect to the requirements of conspicuous legi bility, is the inertia and apathy the consuming public, and the lack of a central boycotting organizahandling of all complaints of this nature.

The law is less clear as to whether labeling a product "made in Wurttemberg," "made in Saxony." etc., is legitimate. pression used in the Tariff Act is that the label shall indicate the country of origin. The Act further provides that the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe the detailed rules and regulations under which the Act is to be enforced. Now the Treasury Department has always taken the position that "indicate" is not synonymous with "designate" or "name" "designate" or "name" or state.

Under its regulations, a Swedish article may be stamped "made in Stockholm" (if this be the fact); Czecho-Slovakian article "made in Bohemia"; any Canadian article-with the name of the Province where the article origi-nated. With respect to German the Trea sury regulations specifically permit the use of the names "Baden," "Bavaria," "Prus-sia," "Rhineland," "Saxony," and sia," "Rhineland," "Saxony," and "Wurttemberg." as sufficiently "indictating the country of origin" (see Customs Regulations, Article 509, 1931 Ed. and arrandments). There is a serious doubt as to be soundness of the Treasury rulings. It must be evident that there are millions who have never heard of Baden or Wurttemberg, or who do not know where Sax-ony is. To a great man; people "Saxony" must sound like the name of an "Anglo-Saxon" coun-

—the highest tribunal having jurisdiction over customs disputes -has frequently emphasized the importance of avoiding confusion in the minds of consumers with respect to the "country of origin."

In American Burtonizing Co. U. S., 13 Court of Cust. App. p. 652, the Court beld the word
"Alsne," the name of a Department of France, to be an insufficient indication of the country of origin. The language of the opinion is extremely significant:

"We do not think that Con-'ntended that American urchasers, consumers, or users of foreign-made goods should be required to speculate, investi-gate, or interpret in order that they might ascertain the country of origin."

In a recent case a shipment of dates entered with the marking "Mesopotamia." The Customs "Mesopotamia." The Customs Court found on consulting the that modern Mesopotamia was but a part of a larger country, Iraq. It held that the mark-ing was improper because it apared "that there is no modern sovereign country known as Mesopotamia". .(Van Dyk & Reeves T. D. Aug. 17, 1933).

The legality of the Customs reg-ulations with reference to the Reich goods marked "Saxony," "Bavaria," etc., has not been "Bayaria," etc., has not been squarely presented to the courts. squarely presented to the courts.

It is quite possible that if evidence of actual confusion in the public mind were submitted, the present regulations would be inbatebiley. That such confusion exists and is deliberately fostered by unscrupulous dealers, is a well known fact.

The case is squarely within the language of the Customs Court decision in the Van Dyk case ("there is no modern sovereign country nown as Mesopotamia").

There are, of course, means other than court actions whereby the regulations could be amended or superseded. American comnetitors of the "Sayon" or "Wurttembergian" importers might well make direct representations to the Treasury Department and insist on an amendment of the rulings in light of the changed for Failing to obtain relief, they might petition Congress to amend appropriate sections of the the appropriate sections of the Tariff Act so as to eliminate the word "indicate" and substitute "designate" in connection with the "country of origin" requirement.

The labeling provisions of the Tariff Act afford those interested in the anti-Nazi boycott their sole opportunity to lean on the strong arm of the federal government in stemming the influx of Reich goods into this country. Moreover, these laws apply only to a portion of the total German im-Crude materials, whether sold separately or as ingredients of finished products, need not be labeled. In addition, considerable quantities of German merchan-dise are purposely left unfinished in some minor detail, are transshipped to any adjacent country where they receive the finishing touches, and thence enter the U. Mrs. Parker is as fine a dialogue writer as we have and the spoken word and facial emotions of the players add strength to her stingremarks.

Mrs. Parker knows her own sex and most of these sketches have as their principal components, women. She is merciless in por-traying the addes in all their not se charming weaknesses. She is particularly pertinent when her ladies are engaged in their ever raging battle over the male species.

The acting, especially that of Enid Markey and Shirley Booth is more than just competent. The players seem to have caught completely the spirit that inspired Mrs. such unmitigated Park to cruelty.

Deutsch, Answering Lipsky Suggestion, Takes Issue With His Proposal to Postpone World Jewish Congress

Rejecting the suggestion of Louis Lipsky, chairman of the American Palestine Campaign, that the World Jewish Congress be postponed, as published in the Jewish Daily Bulletin of February Bernard S. Deutsch, president of the American Jewish Congress, yesterday issued a statement tak-ing exception to Mr. Lipsky's views.

Mr. Deutsch's statement in its full text follows:

"There are several curious as-pects to Mr. Lipsky's statement counselling postponement of the World Jewish Congress which apared in the Jewish Daily Bulletin of February 7.

"Forgetting for the moment the arguments which he presents in favor of such postponement, we are impressed by the breaching of organizational discipline on the part of one who, in his own or-ganization, has created displinary adherence and has insisted upon

Sunday Meeting

"Next Sunday there is to be a meeting of the National Executive Committee of the Zionist Organization where the World Jewish Congress will be discussed and a decision made on whether or not the Zionist Organization is to participate in the elections.

"With Mr. Lipsky occupying the position he does in the Zionist Organization and the certainty that he wields large influence on the decisions of any of its bodies, his endeavor to place his opinions before the public in advance of the meeting seems dubious, the more o in the light of his position with the American Jewish Congress the American Jewish Congress and his relationship to the World Jewish Congress project as a member of that body. Mr. Lipsky is a vice president and a member of the Administrative Committee of the American Jewish Congress The same views presented in his public statement were advanced public statement were advanced by him at a meeting of the Ad-municative Committee of the Jewish Congress on December 14th, where they were voted down by a large majority.
"In view of the foregoing and in view of his known leanings to-ward party discipline, his tactics in this connection will be difficult for him to explain satisfactorily

What He Wants

"On the surface apparently he admits he is not opposed to the World Jewish Congress and recog-nizes its necessity in Jewish life. What he wants, according to his statement, is postponement for better preparation. He presumes that the 1932 World Jewish Con-ference in Geneva was not sufficiently representative and requests that 'another representative World Conference be called to take up the matter of a World Jewish Congress.' We should like to bring to his attention that the call to he World Jewish Congress issued by the Geneva Conference of 1932 was reiterated by a second Conference in 1933, which allowed sufficient time for the idea to penetrate the minds of all those who are able to conceive of the impor-tance of a World Jewish Congress. It may be true that the idea has not yet penefrated the conscious-ness of the great Jewish masses, and equally is it true that it has and equally is it true that it has not broken down the barriers against the project erected by those elements who, as a matter of course, are opposed to any nanal Jewish idea of such great mensions.

"Mr. Lipsky has been identified rule of a Jewish democracy. Well versed as he is in the history of Zionism. nism, surely he knows the itself. He knows how many years were to clapse from the days of Theodore Herzl with his fights against 'protest Rabbinar' until the creation of the Jewish Agency by Dr. Weizmann.

Surely Mr. Lipsky Recalls

"Yet the idea of Zionism was easier understood by these oppo-sition elements than the idea of a democratic world Jewish body empowered to handle the problem of millions of East European Jews-Jews whom these dominat dominant wealthy elements regard merely as objects of philanthropy or at most as 'poor co-religionists of the East.' Diplomatic negotiations and 'preparing the ground' will hardly ucceed in themselves in bringing these gentlemen into the fold where the American Jewish Con-gress is concerned. Surely Mr. Lipsky recalls the negotiations which preceded the convening of the first American Jewish Congress, the overwhelming interest of the American Jewish com-munity in the first American Jewish Congress created the tide that swept these gentlemen along with

"We recognize that the financial control of Jewish social work and Jewish national endeavor is still vested in a measure with those elements who are fearful of any representative gathering which monstrates Jewish unity, Theodore Herzl faced a similar situation. He, too, tried first to win to the support of his idea the Jewish 'barons,' titled and untitled. The support of the 'barons' however support or the batons nowever did not come until the people themselves, through the Zionist movement, created such substantial national values in Palestine that it was impossible to ignore their reality.

Barons Hard to Win

"With regard to the World Jewish Congress, no one is naive enough to believe that the 'barons' will be won over immediately. The great masses of the Jewish peo-ple will be the bulwark and the new stronghold of national will.

Only the strength of the strong-hold will compel the 'barons' to vield to some form of national dis-

"Thus we are concerned with the attitude of the large masses of the Jewish people. And the masses of the people will have to be edu-cated to support the idea of the World Jewish Congress in the same fashion that they were won over to Zionism. Here too Mr. over to Zionism. Here too, Mr. over to Zionism. Here too, Mr.
Lipsky could well draw a parallel from Zionist history. It was not a great popular movement which created the Zionist Congress. The Zionist movement. The World Jewish Congress will have to be created first. The position which it will win for itself in Jewish life can come only through its ex-istence and the character of its functioning. If mass support is to be wen over to the World Jew. to be won over to the World Jewish Congress idea, does Mr. Lipsky seek greater catastrophes than those of the year 1933 to arouse the people to the need of fashioning their own destiny?

History Makes Us

"Mr. Lipsky knows that for the most part it is not we who make history but history which makes us. We are only now beginning to learn to use historic events not of our making to mold our naor our making to moid our na-tional destiny and to prevent fu-ture calamities. That is what we are trying to do now. The Jewish masses may not have been ready to answer the call to the World Jewish Congress issued by the Conference of 1932. But the calamities of 1933 have created a willingness to act which it would through the indefinite postpone-ment of the convening of the World Jewish Congress.

"We earnestly endeavor to be-lieve that what Mr. Lipsky means is only 'temporary' postponement. But familiarity with parliamen-tary procedure leads us to believe that postponement is an ingenious way of consigning the idea to per-manent internment. We are loathe to believe that a man of Mr. Lipsky's stature in Jewish life has succumbed to these parliamentary tactics. So we are to postpone it for a year, or two, or three—until such a time as Mr. Lipsky or his reorganized World Jewish Con-ference see fit to convene the Conference see fit to convene the Con-gress. We reject this suggestion. We regard it culpable to postpone the effort to impress the great masses of our people with the necessity for action-in order to allow for more deliberations, negotiations and careful preparations. The combating of Nazi propaganda in our own country, the organization of Jewish life here. cannot be real and effective unless it is central to the idea of worldwide national organism seeking to protect the existence and the fu-ture of the Jewish people throughout the world. Surely Mr. Lipsky does not need any enlightenment on the tremendous educational value of World Jewish Congress propaganda for organization in this country.

One of Primary Functions

"Equally culpable is it not to recognize the great spiritual and psychological value of the World Jewish Congress for the Jews of other lands, particularly in East-ern and Central Europe to protect whose interests will be one of the primary functions of the World Jewish Congress at its initiation. Irrespective of what the first ses-sion of the World Jewish Congress accomplishes in terms of actual reconstruction; in the finding of new lands of immigration, in the restoration of the civic and the human rights of the Jews—the mere fact of the existence of a central tribune of a united Jewish people is certain to make life more bearable for the millions of those who await rehabilitation. Delving back into Jewish history, we discover ho much our people have endured and have been enabled to endure solely because of their feel-ing of cohesiveness and mutual responsibility.

CHAPTER XVII The Dream

"You are in my studio, Sarah," said he. "You have been sick, very sick indeed, but, thanks to God, you have recovered. you will be up on your feet, strong and healthy again. Do you remem-ler coming here?"

Sarah smiled at him.
"Yes. Thank you," she murmured, and covering her face with her hands she wept quietly.

Tezkeiro leaned over her, and seizing one of her hands, he kissed

"Darling, you must not cry. All ill go well. I will call the woman will go well. I will call the woman who attended you while you were sick. She will make you more comfortable. But please do not

The girl recovered her strength slowly. A great weakness and deep apathy followed the crisis which had saved her life. She thought of nothing, felt nothing. She greeted Tezkeiro with a smile of mournful recognition and as the doctor had ordered absolute quietness, the artist remained near her for only short periods at a

The first renewal of her strength rose in the form of a joyful recrose in the form of a joyrul rec-ognition of her own existence. Never had she experienced so acutely the simple and direct sweetness of living. She felt the sweetness or nying. She felt the happiness of breathing, the intoxi-cation of her cool body, the delight arising from the touch of her soft, arising from the touch of her suit, heav, hair against her shoulders and breast. She was filled with the ruddy gaiety of the sun, and became unable to draw her eyes away from Tezkeiro's paintings of flowers and fruit, of precious cloths and naked bodies

For the first time in her life she considered her youth and her beauty as possessions belonging to her, distinct from her dreams and her career. 'A great mirror hang-ing opposite her bod reflected her face which she had only known imperfectly. She studied it hap-pily. She admired her naked arms, the sharp and delicate line of her shoulders and neck, the soft lustre of her dark flesh, and the golalmost imperceptible down den, almost imperceptible down which covered her body.

A new vitality strengthening her body did not, however, awake her moral energy. Sarah abandoned herself wholly to a swest and happy languor. She wished to C. cam of nothing, to remember nothing. The morrow meant as life. thing. The morrow meant as lit-tle to her as yesterday. The au-tumn sun and the pure light which flooded the studio through the vast windows were sufficient to color the dragging hours in which she yielded to a thoughtless and dreamless rest, to her youthful-ness of which she had at last become conscious.

Tezkeiro, who now lingered for long hours beside her, tried to distract her mind by stories. Sarah heard him vaguely. The musical and gentle sound of his voice interested her much more than his words, for in his voice she recognized that youth and voluptuousness she so much longed for.

In the curve of his high fore-head, in his silken curls, in the brightness of his chestnut-brown eyes, in the arrogant profile of his face, Sarah found the same joy which the sun and colors gave her Tezkeiro came to her as a radiance which caressed her delicious lanwhich caressed her denoted has guor. It seemed as if she lay in a golden cradle while above her throbbed the happy rhythm of the universe. An immense feeling of self-love submerged her entire being, like a cool freshet of spring

She often remembered that terrible night; the rain, the porch, the sound of the harpsichord, and Tezkeiro's cape. Without him she would have collapsed in the street "e and the night-patrol would have arrested her. She owed her safety, her very life to him.

During one of these moments of recollection Sarah suddenly grasped Tezkeiro's hand and raised it to her lips. Though this kiss was apparently the gesture of a child, it was at the same time ardent femiling shara and Tezkei. dent, feminine, sharp, and Tezkeiro was deeply stirred by it. Gid-diness overcame him. He realized how well-founded had been his misgivings that at the first contact with her flesh his resolutions would melt like shadows. He understood that he must master him-self at once. He slowly freed his hand, laid the girl's head back on the pillow, and barely touching it with his lips, he kissed her hair.

"Do not disquiet yourself," he murmured in a voice of infinite gentleness. "Do not disquiet yourself, sweetheart."

He had used the familiar term of endearment for the first time, but neither of them experienced any embarrassment at its use. They were so close to each other! They were so close to each other.
Of what consequence to them was that thing people of thin and cold blood called "Reason?" Reason had been invented by merchants had been invented by merchance and money changers. In the joy-ous carnival of life he had met Sarah. It was his fate. And now Saran. It was his late. And how he was warning the girl against excitement. He! Confronted by the happy excitement of blood, by tempest of life, by the marvellous wine of youth, he, the artist Tezkeiro, talked the nonsense of a Protestant preacher.

Emotion stifled him. He felt the need of space, of movement, and he dashed forth into the street. He walked rapidly, striding along with no other purpose than to flee the studio where Sarah lay, Sarah, the living palette, the harmony of color and perfume, Sarah who had brigged his hand

Drunk with passion he strod? nward, farther and farther from the studio, as he believed suddenly he recognized his own doorway. Astonished, as if it wers of cream, he flung the street door open and hastened up the stairs. He silently opened the door. The bollique rays of the sun were tall.

ing on Sarah's couch. With arms extended above her head, and with closed eyes, she radiated all the happiness of returned health. A smile lingered on her full, rao'st lips. And this smile, passing from her mouth, hovered over her firm nd slender neck, over her breasts. Sarah's bosom rose and fell regularly and it seemed to Tezkeiro that he could see all the breath-ing cells of her body driak the sun and secrete its secret par-

He gently approached the girl After standing a few moments fa-scinated, he suddenly dropped to his knees beside the low divan on which she lay, and pressed his head against her legs.

Recognizing Tezkeiro, who distractedly murmured her name, Sarah trembled. Like lightning Sarah trembert. The agreement caress, these stammered words, fell upon her. A wave of joys unknown engulfed her, spread through her body, submerged her body in troubled twilight. Convulsively she stretched forth her hands toward his curls and grasped them. He raised his head and saw her burning face, her flaming eyes, her half-open mouth. She clasped her naked arms passionately around his neck.

Nazi Speaker Belittles War On Reich Jews

Auhagen Says Hitler Is Merely People's Voice; Newman Speaks

(Special to the J.D.B.)
MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Feb. 8.
Speaking before students representing codeges and universaties from the entire eastern sector of the United States at the tenth annual Weslyan University pariey on race relations, Dr. F. E. Auhagen of the German consulate in New York, representing the Nazi side, declared tonight that Germany is simply doing what Russia and Italy did upon coming to power. defended his government's program on the ground that the ex-cesses "so widely exaggerated" were simply a manifestation of the unemployed professional man.

Dr. Auhagen described himself as "no Jew baiter." "Many Chrisas "no Jew batter." "Many Chris-tian students felt that the legal and medical professions were closed to them because of excess-ive Jewish control. Of course, I'm not blaming the Jews if they did abuse their power," said the Nazi emissary. "And now the National emissary. "And now the National Socialists have taken control of the government simply as a party program, thus merely reflecting the voice of the peopli."

Will Ease Up on Jews

In time, restrictions will ease up, he predicted. "Jews will be permitted to practice their professions in proportion to their racial population. Others who will find it difficult to cope with the new program can migrate either to Palestine or settle in certain regions of Russia," said the Ger-man representative.

As the Jewish spokesman, Rabbi Louis I. Newman, of Congregation Podeph Sholom, New York, talking on "The Nazis and German Jewry," declared that Germany must be "economically isolated" until her leaders realize that "force, intimidation and torture cannot win for her a single favor-able judgment outside her borders. Nazi Germany can expect no good will on the part of the United States or other countries where liberalism is este med until she abandons he. program of persecu-tion." The Manhattan minister exclaimed: "The record of Hitler's regime is stain d with the blood "I martyrs, and nothing he can do will suffice to erase the blemish."

Reviewing the Machiavellian policies of the Third R ich, the rabbi asserted: "Jewish influence has been exaggerated, but never-theless a loyal, intelligent and culthriess a 'nyal, intelligent and cul-turally creative group like the German Jews have much to offer upon the altar of their country's welfare."

Efforts of Jewish leaders to see Chancellor Dollfuss and present the Jewish situation to him from their viewpoint have been uni-formly unsuccessful, the chancellor refusing to see all Jewish delega tions. It is understood that pri-vately, however, Dollfuss declared that the Jews should feel happy that so far, no specific Jewish question exists in Austria because the government, in its present po-sition, has no time to deal with a Jewish question.

But if the Dollfuss regime continues in power, legal discrimina-tions against the Jews are only a matter of time. The Christian-Social party, a major part of the Dollfuss support, despite the stand taken by the Catholic Bishops condemning Nazi anti-Semitism, demning Nazi anti-Semitism, has taken a strong stand against the Jews. Leaders of the party such as Dr. Emmerich Czermak, who have preached a program of "dis-similation" as opposed to assimila-tion of the Jews, have recently re-neural these. newed their demands for discriminatory laws regulating Jewish cultural, professional and commeractivities. Whatever the personal attitude of members of the Dollfuss cabi-net, it is evident here on the scene that the government will unhesi-tatingly make anti-Semitism one of its fundamental planks if by so doing it can deprive the Nazi movement of some of its popular appeal and can strengthen its hold on its followers.
