An Inspiring Example

MAYOR LAGUARDIA spoke with his usual courage and bluntness when he said at luncheon in honor of Charles Edward Russell:

"The German question is not one which concerns the Jews alone but civilization as a whole."

"We can by repeated protest and by a system of boycotting German-made goods impress German people that they cannot expect the friendship of the world so long as they tolerate the present regime."

"The same type of arrogance that controls Germany today controlled Germany in 1914." As the Mayor of the greatest city in the world, as a fearless progressive, as an American and as the son of a Jewess, Mr. LaGuardia has set a fine example to the Jews and Gentiles alike. The inhumanity of Nazism in Germany and the sinister motives behind Nazi propaganda in other lands, including the United States, must not be glossed over by soft words and diplomatic insinuations. Those who expose and denounce the Nazi regime of silent programs and the Nazi prop...

of strife and confusion... a great service to the world. They are working for peace by exposing the Hitler menace to peace, and this time there is no greater task before the moral forces of the world than to work for peace.

"The only weakness in Mayor LaGuardia's statement was his reference to German arrogance as being the same as that which controlled Germany in 1914. The arrogance of Germany under the Kaiser on the eve of the war did not express itself in such savage forms as Hitlerite arrogance has assumed. Germany was the only nation responsible for the World War. Russian intrigues and Austrian ambitions also played a determining role in the events that brought on the catastrophe. But Hitler's Germany is now deliberately and brazenly working for a war of vengeance."

World Army To Intervene, Paris Project

Talks With Rome, London Planned to Take Up Next Step

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
PARIS, Feb. 13.—French political circles were today discussing the possibility of an international army being mobilized to defend Austria's independence.

Conversations among the governments in Rome, London and Paris were suggested in order to prepare for the possible offer of army units through the League of Nations if the Austrian government asks for them.

Senator Henri Berenger, chairman of the Senate committee on Foreign Relations, writing in the Agence Economique et Financiere, insists that France, Italy and England "must protect Vienna without the loss of a minute by force of international arms if need be."

"It not," he said, "it is the end of the League and the beginning of a European war."

"Concerted international occupation of Vienna, if it becomes indispensable, should take the form of an international army put at the disposal of the Austrian government," Senator Berenger urged.

Russian Jews Being Absorbed, Says Rodman, Reporter

Russian Jews, nearly 3,000,000 of them, are fast being assimilated and absorbed by the Soviet Russia which has since the overthrow of Tsarism passed death sentence on religion and religious practices. As a result, the Jews are losing their "racial solidarity" and intermarriage is common.

Samuel J. Rodman, Russian correspondent for the Exchange Telegraph in London which serves about 300 newspapers in England and France, and for the Philadelphia Public Ledger, who is now in the United States June, 1933, for a short visit and received an appointment as instructor of English in the Moscow Institute of Foreign Languages. Liberal Wins Salonica Election—Jew Voters Poll 757 Votes

SALONICA, Feb. 13.—Nicolas Manos, government candidate for mayor, was elected to that post of an international army put at the disposal of the Austrian government, which polled but 757 votes in all out of a total of 38,000.

Announcement of the results of the election evoked stormy scenes and were greeted in a number of places with shouts of "Down with the Jews!"

The anti-Semitic press has come out with characteristic comments on the election, Makedonia declaring that "we shall settle our account with the Jews, who are themselves responsible for any-Zionistic regime for Palestine."

Peace Reestablished as Some Shops Open—Police Guard Restores Order Over Danube

(By Special Correspondent Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
VIENNA, Feb. 13.—Austria's civil war flared strongly tonight as the government forces of Chancellor Dollfuss brought up heavy artillery to use against the Socialist strongholds as totals of the dead in the two-day disorders reached a total estimated in some quarters as high as 2,000.

Peace was reestablished in the Jewish districts of Vienna tonight as tension eased somewhat. Jewish shops in some of the districts, which had been closed and tightly shuttered yesterday and today, were opening for business tonight. The center of the city and the dense Jewish quarters just across the Danube were peaceful under heavy police guard. The centers of Jewish population in the Austrian capital were not in the range of fire of the artillery brought into play by the government in the fierce battles for control of the remaining Socialist strongholds in the city.

Berlin to Keep Hands Off

But if Czechs March In Nazis May Retaliate

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—While Germany is taking the most intense interest in Austrian developments, it was determined to keep hands off and allow Austria to work out its own salvation, a spokesman for the German Foreign Office declared emphatically today. However, he added "if the Czechs should decide to march upon Austria, we might have to emerge from our reserve."

"We, as neighbors and friends of Austria, are most anxious that peace should prevail, but peace cannot come as long as Dollfuss and his base their regime on Austrian bayonets and foreign sympathies, and not upon the will of the Austrian people," the German spokesman said.

Pickets Protest Showing Here Of Nazi Film

Object to Display of S. A. Mann Brand, Whitewash Picture

An attempt to picket in front of the Bavarian Film Exchange, 489 Fifth Avenue, Distributors of the Nazi propaganda film, "S. A. Mann Brand," by the Film and Photo League of New York City was frustrated yesterday afternoon. The participants had begun to unfurl several placards denouncing the picture when police demanded a permit to hold the demonstration and the permit was not forthcoming.

Arriving at 12:30, about a score of non-unioned demonstrators in front of the building and began their show. After police cautioned them they dispersed. The spokesmen for the group, the Brooklyn later asserted that a permit had been obtained and that the demonstrators, in greatly augmented numbers, would return today noon and resume where they had left off.

Charles Hertzitz is the reputed head of the Bavarian Film Exchange. The Exchange has mail and phone messages at the Fifth Avenue address but has no office there, it was learned. Postcards denouncing the Nazi film have been sent to Hertzitz. Also several were phone calls from across several New York movie houses relative to the showing of the film in this city, which at present is being exhibited in the West.

According to persons who witnessed the film in Berlin it slanders Jews and depicts Nazis as "snow-white" angels. Heard in many places of the film is the Nazi cry "Juda Verreckt!" meaning perish Jewry.

It is claimed by the Film and Photo League that the picture had already been exhibited privately in this city for Nazi sympathizers, and that at present it is being shown in several cities throughout the country. The League asserts that the film is slated to open sometime this month at a prominent Broadway theatre.

Debating Youth Leaps To Shadchan's Defense

A group of young people in Brooklyn have launched the defense of the apparently outmoded shadchan, or marriage broker, and indicated that they needed his services as much as had their elders.

They argued that if more than 100,000 women today seek the services of matrimonial bureaus it demonstrates that we still need the shadchan.

If dates are arranged at colleges for small fees, it indicates that the functions of the matrimonial agency are not a thing of the past, they contended.

And if one of the minor sources of Jewish newspaper income is in matrimonial advertisements, that proves that there is still plenty of room for the shadchan.

This defense occurred at the Flatbush Jewish Center during a debate on the question, "That Shadchons is Beneficial." The debate was considered a draw, the applause on each side being so equally divided.

The Young People's League of Temple Beth-El of Manhattan Beach upheld the affirmative, while the young people of Flatbush argued the negative.

Hail Shadchons!

Defending Shadchons Mr. Davidson said that the marriage broker, with his long established historical past, had been beneficial to the Jewish people. He established the practice when he found a wife for Isaac the son of Abraham. He also stated that the shadchan as a disinterested party, is often the best judge in the matter.

Sylvia Gordon, on the negative, presented her remarks in rhyme. She said:

"I'll now paint a picture of the marriage broker, (May he grow broke, broke and broke) Who acts as a commercial interferer, Whose motive is money when it should be sincere.

He seals up a marriage and collects his money, And assures you he's got you the best, a honey.

And after you've gone, null he sends out a notice, He laughs, 'cause he knows that he sold you a lemon.

I heard of another that to me is still worse, For a life without slumber is a pitted curse. The broker in question was a bit short of cash Mating a woman who slept in the night.

With a man who snored loudly all thru the night.

Shadchons is Hitlerism in the land of romance, And of course with Herr Hitler we must stand a chance.

So if you're alone and want a companion for life; If you are longing for a husband or wife,

Don't go to a broker, he'll fool you, I say.

Put an ad in the paper—it's cheaper that way."

Tolstoy and Shaw Views on Jews Told In Bernstein's Talk

Both Tolstoy and Shaw were outspoken in their discussion of the Jewish problem, according to Herman Bernstein, editor of the Jewish Daily Bulletin, speaking over station WEDV last night in the Bulletin's weekly program.

"Tolstoy declared that 'all people are Jews' because they suffered the Jews the Russian writer was quoted as explaining.

"Shaw," Mr. Bernstein declared, "described the Jewish question as due to the Jew's integrity to his business ability, to his sense of fairness, to his intelligence, to his hard work. And he believed that the deep-rooted prejudice against the Jew continued developing because the non-Jewish world did not pause to analyze its unfounded prejudice." Shaw said that "Maccabees was right when he said that if you started a prejudice against red-headed people that it would soon develop a general hatred of them, and they might be massacred."

Effort to Better Feeling Between Jew and Gentile Starts in Capital

(Special to the J.D.B.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 13.—A four-point program with a view to eliminate misunderstanding among Jews, Protestants and Catholics, will be launched in Washington at the same time the program gets under way in leading cities throughout the country.

Plans for the campaign were announced by Professor Boyd Carpenter, chairman of the local committee of the National Conference of Jews and Christians. The plans were prepared under the direction of Newton D. Baker, co-chairman of the conference.

2. To encourage church and synagogue youth to organize to discuss civil relationships of Protestants, Catholics and Jews.

3. To extend college and city "seminars" and round-table programs.

4. To form a women's committee of 1,000 state leaders, headed by Mrs. Dorothy Canfield Fisher, which would parallel the existing men's advisory council of 1,000.

Among those on the Washington committee in charge of the program are Maurice D. Rosenberg, Ross F. Downing, and Miss Katherine F. Lenroot.

New Haven Divines Ask War on Prejudice—Discuss Causes

(Special to the J.D.B.)

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 13.—Unless the "German wave of anti-Semitism" is checked, it will spread to many parts of the world, Professor of Hartford E. Lucock of the Yale Divinity School said here in a religious symposium held at the First Methodist Church. Other speakers included Mark J. Sweeney, of the Knights of Columbus, and Rabbi Louis Greenberg, of Congregation B'Nai Jacob, New Haven.

Dr. Lucock, who spoke on behalf of the Protestant Church, said that the people of all nations must learn to say "we" instead of "I" if race prejudice is to be eliminated. He said that churches must be made a force for good.

"History in the past," Mr. Sweeney said, "has been little more than propaganda, and with its elimination, better understanding will result. Religious prejudice is dying out, and the few times it has appeared recently have been due to political motives."

Rabbi Greenberg said that the greatest cause of prejudice is racial, religious and economic forces, and that the most important of these is economic. He declared that the Jews will always be followers of idealistic causes and for this reason they are branded as radicals. He said that if the Christian church will work to bring about a world of social justice in which people no longer would have to worry over the basic necessities of life, the economic factor in prejudice would be eliminated.

Anti-Hitler Demonstration Held in Cuba

Students and Workers Tear Swastika From Consulate Building

(J.T.A. Special Correspondence)
HAVANA, Feb. 5.—Cuban students and workers joined in a well-organized demonstration near the German consulate here, protesting against Hitlerite dolings in Germany.

The demonstrators succeeded in tearing the Nazi Swastika banner down from the consulate building, police when they attempted to hold a street meeting.

Local Nazis have found the general state of unrest in Cuba very favorable to their propaganda purposes which they are carrying on as fully as possible, declaring that National Socialism will save all the world, therefore Cuba as well. To facilitate the spread of such propaganda, interested parties here have begun the publication of a Havana Spectator in Spanish. The name of the magazine is apparently meaningless, after that of the chief Nazi newspaper in Germany, the Volkischer Beobachter. The Havana Spectator is published and edited by a well-known German, a Nazi named J. E. Runken. Runken attempts to prove that Hitlerism is the way that Cuban liberation can be achieved. In the latest number of the Spectator, openly advocates the swastika as the future Cuban emblem of liberation.

Nazi Magazine Smothered
Runken is known to be a non-professional in the journalistic field and to have little money. All indications are that he is being subsidized by the Nazi embassy here and the Cuban Nazi movement.

The back cover of the November Spectator carries a black swastika with the caption: "This is the flag of the German National Socialist Labor Party." The December back cover carries a swastika consisting of five alternating blue and white stripes captioned: "With this some day be the flag of the Cuban National Socialist Labor Party."

The number issue also makes a plea for circulation. The appeal is written in English and reads, in part:

"El Espectador Habanero (The Havana Spectator) is published throughout the Spanish-speaking world...and beyond."

"The editorial policy of this Monthly Magazine is thoroughly honest (but open and unbigoted up-to-date, nevertheless), quite in spite of its 'revolutionary' trappings and its radical Cubanism."

What Hitler Spells

Egyptian Daily Reports Talk By Arab, British Leader

(J.T.A. Special Correspondence)
CAIRO, Jan. 20.—A surprising story is contained in Al Balagh, the Arabic daily, of a reported conversation between a prominent Moslem personage and a high ranking Government official, obviously meaning Musa Kazem Pasha Al Hussein and General Sir Arthur Wauchoppe, and the negotiations that were the preliminary to the granting of licenses to hold Arab protest processions in Palestine.

The Moslem personage at first pleaded he was ill, but if the matter concerned a vital Arab national issue he was prepared to meet the distinguished Government official, asking for the interview, and if it concerned the forthcoming Arab demonstration, he would prefer not to, as these would be held with or without permission, says the Jerusalem correspondent of Al Balagh.

The Englishman said to the Pasha that he wanted to use his influence to prevent a clash between the Government forces and the Arabs. Moreover, in view of that Moslem dignitary's standing in the country since pre-war days, and his appreciation of the law, he wished him to ensure that the Arabs would seek permission for their demonstration, so as not to be treated as law-breakers.

Demonstration Discussed
A high secretariat official went to see the Arab and discussed with him the form of the demonstration, stating that if the Arab Executive asked for permission and submitted the program there would be no difficulty granting it. The Arab pointed out that it was a peaceful procession intended to express disturbed Arab feeling over Jewish immigration and purchase of land, and if assurance were given him that it would be permitted, he would exert his influence over the Arabs to seek the licenses. A personal and confidential letter was sent to the Arab in which the secretariat promised to permit the processions.

(Treasure), Yavna and Zevel. A whole family of Moscovics have adopted the cognomen of Cohen, thus swelling the Palestinian Cohens by exactly nine. They are all Rumanians.

The nationality of the who have adopted new names seems equally divided between Palestinian, Polish and Rumanian. There are several Germans, a few Russians, four Afghans and one Turk. The latter changed his name from Muallim Gabriel to Eliahu Gabriel.

Another senior official then visited the Arab in the presence of other responsible Arab leaders and said he understood that the Arab demonstration would be an ordinary festive occasion, celebrating Id Al Fitr, the end of Ramadan, so it was permissible. But one of the Arab leaders said that this was the basis for permission, they would not accept it; it was a political demonstration coinciding with the end of the festival. They hoped to secure their just rights through such a demonstration, it was their protest against the Mandatory authorities. For himself he would like a clash between the authorities and the Arabs over an unimportant procession, he said, because a nation's emancipation was won by bloodshed.

Arab Gives Reasons
This same Arab who is thought to be Aoum Bey Adnan Had, then went into an unimportant procession, he said, because a nation's emancipation was won by bloodshed. The Arab rights, blood would flow up to the knees; and perhaps that may yet happen in Palestine if a solution is not found. The Arabs will not retreat until they obtain recognition of their rights and abolition of the present policy.

"You have lawful ways of protest," commented the Englishman. "We have tried them out for fifteen years, and nothing came of them," retorted the Arab, according to the paper.

Ultimately, members of the Bureau of the Arab Executive met and decided to seek permission for their procession; and this was granted. And details of the preliminary conversations have only just come to light in an Egyptian newspaper, Musa Kazem Pasha Al-Hussein had forbidden their revelation in the Palestine press, it is stated.

Arabs Claim Victory

(J.T.A. Special Correspondence)
JERUSALEM, Jan. 20.—Al James Al Arabon pointed out in an editorial that "justice has triumphed over the government, and right has prevailed over might in Palestine, between the Arabs and the government." As a result, the Palestine government has been compelled to grant the Arab demand for a demonstration, and that is their victory," the Arab paper said.

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—Jewish agents have now been thrown out of the German economic system, today when the Central Union, an association of firm representatives in which men of all creeds were members, was dissolved and no provision made for its Jewish membership.

Non-Jewish members of the Central Union were transferred to the Aryan Reich Association of Trade Representatives, but Jewish members now have no organization to which they can turn for protection of their interests, a problem which thus becomes acute. Whether or not prospective emigrants should be permitted to export currency was the principal topic discussed today at a Halle conference on Jewish emigration from Germany. All Government offices for advising prospective emigrants were represented at the meeting.

Entire Factory Moving From Lwow to Palestine

(J.T.A. Special Correspondence)
HAIFA, Jan. 20.—An entire domestic utensils' manufactory, owned by Messrs. Hirsch Puttler and Jacob Finkelstein of Lwow, is being transferred to a five-dunam site in the Oil Reserve Area here, and will be the first of the kind. New machinery was bought in Vienna. The plant produces cooking machines and other domestic articles and furniture. Other iron-wares will be produced for the building trades, and about thirty men will be employed at the outset.

Engineer Starts Factory

(J.T.A. Special Correspondence)
TEL AVIV, Jan. 20.—Engineer Spigelman, formerly of Germany, has started the manufacture of cupboard bolts and screws and chains for beds. He is the first in the manufacture of such screws here. His plant is suitable for branches of iron-ware which are not as yet produced here.

Police Force Brought Out When Gentiles Protest Community Action

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
BUCHAREST, Feb. 13.—The combined efforts of all the members of the police force of Dej, Transylvania, were required today to quell disturbances which arose when the Christian population of the town protested against the execution of a Sabbath duty by the Jewish community of Dej.

When the members of the Jewish community appeared in the streets carrying wire to be used in partitioning off a part of the town for the purpose of establishing an "eyrev" for the Sabbath, the Christian population began a demonstration, insisting that the "eyrev" symbolizes Jewish possession of the township. The demonstrators marched through the streets of the Jewish quarters, breaking windows and damaging the house of the Jewish community president.

Although the police of the town, which is predominantly Jewish, succeeded in establishing order, excitement still continues in the atmosphere.

(According to Jewish custom, which prohibits the carrying of articles on the Sabbath except in one's own home, an "eyrev"—or wire surrounding a district where things may be carried—can be set up by the police surrounding the district.)

CINEMA

By FREDERICK V. SEANE

Down on lower Second avenue at the Yiddish Art Theatre where through this winter Maurice Schwartz has been regaling our people with Yiddish drama and comedy, the first talking and singing picture about Palestine has its premiere yesterday. And it can truthfully be reported that this film, called "The Dream of My People," is an extremely interesting production which you cannot possibly afford to miss.

Presented by the Palestine American Film Co., Ltd., this is an idealistic bit of propaganda calculated to arouse further interest in the Promised Land, flashed on the screen are shots of Jerusalem, Tel-Aviv, Haifa and many other Palestinian settlements. Besides there is a good deal of material showing the building up and growth of various industries and national projects. Ruttenberg's Electrical Works, Hadassah hospitals and other institutions are among the points of interest.

The producers have been able to catch an almost complete picture of everyday life in Palestine and you are able to see just how the inhabitants work and play. In addition the late Cantor Rosenblatt may be both heard and seen and some of his songs will bring back a keen nostalgia for the voice of that great artist.

"The Dream of My People" is the most eloquent appeal that has come from Palestine. It is more effective than the combined efforts of an entire corps of lecturers.

Other Screen Notes

Last week this column was pretty heavy on the theatrical side. The result was that we have not been able to report on the current pictures until now. First prize goes to Edward G. Robinson in the M. G. M. film, "This Side of Heaven," at the Capitol, plays the part of a worried accountant whose wife is a full novelist. Taken from Marjorie Paradi's novel of the same name, the picture is a sincere, intelligent, restrained production. There is enough action to satisfy the flighty, a happy ending for the sentimental but there is also enough body for the intelligent. The plot is involved and concerns the troubles of the accountant's family. They are not really serious, but of a kind that interested to all. Fay Bainter as the wife is practically perfect.

"Madam's Spy," starring Fay Wray, is unusually good melodrama now showing at the Roxy. It tells of Maria (Fay Wray) who marries an army captain (Nils Astor). She is trying to get information for Russia while he is working just as hard for Germany and Austria. This, as you would suppose, brings about a series of complications which work their ways nearly to a satisfactory end. The photography, and the editing which was done by Karl Freund are excellent and although the picture is pure melodrama and intense, it manages to hold your interest.

At the Paramount (Brooklyn and New York) the offering is not up to par. It is called "Search for Beauty" and seems to be the result of an international contest for movie talent. Some score or more young gentlemen and ladies who had won contests in their localities were sent to Hollywood for a chance to get into one picture. This is it. The story revolves around the promotion of a health resort in which the producers, interested in making money rather than promoting health, leads to the victimizing of the contestants. Considering the material in hand Paramount has done very well indeed.

The Bulletin's Day Book

Interesting light on the conflict between Hitler and Goering is shed in a book about to appear in Paris called "Nazi-Fuehrer Sehen Dich An" ("Nazi Leaders Look at You"). It reveals the presence in the archives of the Gestapo, the Nazi secret state police, at Munich, of a special file in which Heinrich Himmler alone has the key. Himmler is chief of police in Munich and commander of all police outside Prussia. Next to Roehm and Goebbels, he is Hitler's most important ally in the inter-ecine war between the two Nazi idols.

When Goering appointed him head of the Gestapo in Prussia, Hitler immediately promoted Himmler to a similar post in Bavaria. Other states, Wuerttemberg, Baden, Hessen, were added to making Himmler head of their Gestapo until today Himmler has complete control of the organization except in Prussia.

It is the task of Gestapo 'not only to combat anti-Fascism within and outside of the Reich, but also to spy on the National Socialist leaders. Perhaps, since the Gestapo has gone at its work with thoroughness, the opening of these archives at some date in the future will reveal the full tale of duplicity, treachery and scandal which marked the rise of the Nazis to power, to an extent not even the bitterest foes of the Nazi Party would dare to suggest.

Moshe Shertok, youthful and brilliant member of the Jewish Agency executive at Jerusalem, recently was called into court as a witness in a case but declined to take oath on the Torah declaring that to do so was in contradiction to his philosophy of life and that his word of honor should suffice.

Many Jewish newspapers have commented on Mr. Shertok's attitude, one paper pointing out that even if Shertok were an atheist he should not have hesitated to take oath on the Torah. Whether one avows that he states the truth by referring to his honor or whether one lays a hand on the oldest law book, which proclaims a duty towards truthfulness, should be a matter of indifference even to a non-believer. Shertok's attitude is commendable; the more the question is: is a Jew if one does not confess to the Jewish religion, or is one a Jew if one confesses to the Jewish religion but does not belong to the Jewish race?

A director of a high school for learning in Berlin who recently visited a church with a group of his students asked the priest to delete the "Hallelujah" from the liturgy. Otherwise, he explained, he would have to leave with his charges. The priest, however, declined to remove the offending word and the director and his pupils left the church.

Die Kirchenmusik, official journal of the Evangelical Church, has written a book of appreciation that "German sacred music freed from the contaminating chemical influence of Jeunesse Juive and its kindred in music, theatre, society, economic life, etc., deplored, in a recent issue, the fact, that school heads object to the "Hallelujah" which, the publication explains, is derived from the old German Runenschrift.

According to Hermann Wirth, the old Nordic names called the god of the year different according to each season. Thus, in Spring, he was "Ei"; in Summer, "IT"; in Winter, "UT", and in the Autumn season "AL". These names are derived reverently from La, Le, Li, Lo, Lu which refer to the world of Valhalla. One might mention here Herder's trio, Light, Liebe and Leben (Light, Love, Life). All this the school people should know before objecting to "Hallelujah."

The Juedische Rundschau, of Berlin, however, remarks that "Hallelujah" is a Hebrew word the meaning of which is "praise God". In an article of explanation thanks to God, joyous acclamation of life and faith in the creator. Luther, in his translation of the Bible, used the word untranslated. It was thus that similar words, as "Amen," became familiar in the German tongue.

The Romantic Messiah

A Novel Based on the Life of

Sabbatai Zevy

By SALOMON POLIAKOFF

Chapter XX

Well before noon the minions of Khewim Pashah had insinuated themselves into the Jewish camp at the foot of the castle, and applied the rumor that Sultan, overcome with terror, had brought magnificent presents to the castle, attempting through the agency of the Jewish physicians to buy off Sabbatai. This rumor flew from mouth to mouth, and flattered the simple vanity of the crowd. The monarch feared the Messiah! But the Messiah in a Mohammedan turban! That was amusing news, indeed! However the laughter suddenly ceased. In the castle, the frame of a window stirred. Even before the window had swung open, a passionate sigh swept through the camp.

"The Messiah! The Messiah! The Messiah!"

And now in the window casement, clothed in a bright crimson mantle, with arms raised and stretched forth above the camp, stood the Messiah. The window rose a voice, strong, triumphant, full of infinite joy:

"My people! Come to thy Messiah! He will appear thy century-old hope!"

The camp trembled with happiness, shook with a vast shout like the roar of a tempest:

"The Messiah! The Messiah! The Great Dragon! Allahu! Nearer to the Messiah! On to the castle! The right hand of the Lord is exalted! In the right hand of the Lord death is vainly."

The second voice of the psalm wavered uncertainly. A cold wave of fear swept over the people. The throng did not hear him; it stared at the green turban which, like a little hill, crowned the head of the Messiah.

The turban raised his face to the sky and seemed to call out to him, commanding them with a voice that was angry and stern.

Women Praised as 'Eyes of the Blind'

N. Y. Guild for Jewish Blind, Women's Division, Holds Luncheon

Mrs. David E. Goldfarb addressed the 100 women assembled at the third annual luncheon of the women's division of the N. Y. Guild for the Jewish Blind at the Metropolitan Club yesterday. She was introduced by Leonard M. Weinstein who was guest chairman.

Praising the women for doing a bigger service than merely caring for the blind, Mrs. Goldfarb said: "You are not merely doing a great humanitarian piece of work; but you are creating an understanding and sympathetic view toward humanity. If you are eyes to the blind, I hope you will be eyes to this darkened world and bring us back the right road."

Stephen S. Wise, who was to have been the other speaker, sent his greetings and support but was unable to attend because of a death in the family circle.

Mrs. D. Emil Klein, president of the women's division, welcomed the guests, Mrs. Gould and Jack Lawrence entertained.

Russia, and for the "new society which the Bolsheviks have created" so "interesting that he decided to make the country his home. He has written a book which will deal with collectivization and will be an interpretation of Russia's new psychology.

Synagogues crowded on holidays "regarding the subject of religion which the Soviet government opposes without equivocation and makes an effort to wipe out completely. Mr. Rodman had much to say about this."

He told of the two remaining synagogues in Moscow, with its 250,000 Jewish population, and the Jew at the New Year and Yom Kippur services, they were "crowded by worshippers who were drawn by feelings stronger than they thought."

He recalled the instance of a young worker who put in "a double shift the day before Yom Kippur in order to attend services, and who later kept the matter quiet for fear that fellow workers might disdain his company."

He described an organization called Bez Bomzik, the goddess, with an enrollment reported to be 5,000,000, which has as its platform the spread of propaganda execrating religion and conversion of the Russian people to atheism. Mr. Rodman said that Bez Bomzik erects buildings adjoining the twenty-five churches in Moscow and overgrown with ivy.

On one occasion he was engaged in gathering information for a story to deal with Christmas services in Leningrad. He met a young Jew and inquired where the nearest church was.

"It's a little way up the street," directed the boy.

"Where do you take me there?" asked Mr. Rodman.

"No, Sir," he replied. "I won't go near a church. I am a pioneer."

The Russian government makes an effort, however, to encourage the thirty-odd national groups "within its borders. This enfinite and they glory therein like the sun. Thou wilt call and Thou wilt love. Thou wilt see and Thou wilt hear. Thou wilt lead us to the Holy Mountain, to Thy Holy City. Oh, may my tongue cleave to my mouth, and my heart cleave to my hands, never I forget thee, O Jerusalem!"

The Jew in Germany Today

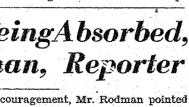

By F. A. VOIGHT

(This is the first of four articles on the Jews in Germany by the brilliant British journalist, F. A. Voight, for many years Berlin correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, a leading liberal newspaper. Mr. Voight had to leave Germany following his disclosures of Nazi complicity in the Reichstag fire and is now stationed in Paris where he surveys the German scene for his newspaper.)

This and the following articles are an attempt to survey the ten months of anti-Semitic persecution in Germany.

Such a survey is bound to be incomplete. Although it is a matter of the widest world-wide knowledge that persecution (and not only of the Jews) has been, and is

F. A. Voight still going on in Germany, the effect is still officially recognized by the German government and its press.

And yet they are only a part of the persecution. The laws that, theoretically, apply to all German citizens whether Gentile or Jew, in practice give the Gentile every possible advantage and the Jew every disadvantage. They prohibit the Gentile from the Jew but not the Jew from the Gentile. Thus a Gentile may libel a Jew with impunity, but not a Jew a Gentile, at least, not if easy the law is Nazi. Brown Shirts have committed innumerable thefts in Jewish shops—they have habitually asked for a cigarette and they have articles at the counter and have received them without payment—while the shopkeeper has had no means of redress.

It was not the obligation of a Gentile to recover a debt from a Jew, but very different or even impossible for a Jew to recover a debt from a Gentile.

In disputes between Jew and Gentile, the law tends very strongly to work against the Jew. Not that the law is the creation of Germany (there are some fair-minded judges and magistrates left), but when the plaintiff or defendant is a Jew, it is easy for the law to be biased.

Soviet Decries Religion But Russia frowns upon Zionism, the Hebrew language and Hebrew teaching, which it bans. Hebrew teachers are not permitted to instruct more than three pupils in their own homes, and Jewish schools for the purpose. Clerics are not permitted to preach in more than one church, a ruling which results in the closing of many of the more remaining Jewish in the country.

"Religion is practically out of business," in Soviet Russia, Mr. Rodman remarked.

The fundamental change which has come about in class privilege in Russia is the result of the Russian Jew there, Mr. Rodman told the writer. From tradesman the masses of Jewry became producers of goods, and the social laborer who they hitherto considered degrading has turned into an earnest love of it, one of the paramount purposes of the collectivization program.

The industrialization of Russia, undertaken in the Five Year Plan, opened a path into large cities for the Jewish people. The quarters of their number have drifted into them and are engaged in white collar work, but they do not regard working in the cities as degrading in government departments, many thousands are in handicraft trades and many are in agriculture.

"Because there is no discrimination," said Mr. Rodman, "there is a tendency for the Jews in the Soviet Union to mix with the Russian people. There is emphasis on class and not racial grouping. The question asked by the Russian government is not whether the Jew is a Jew, but with your Communist affiliation and whether you are a worker."

Mr. Rodman was educated at Columbia University where he was graduated with an Arts degree in 1922.

representatives. To conceal the fact, and in the hope of securing at least some belief in the sincerity of the German government, such precautions that fall into three main categories—the suppression of the Jewish press, the denial of truth, and the victimization of those who tell the truth.

The full truth about the persecution in Germany is not, as yet, to be known. Perhaps it will never be known. The anti-Semitic laws that have been enacted are the worst of the kind. There are the numerous ordinances and rulings passed against Jews by municipalities, professional associations, clubs, and so on. These, in their totality, are unparalleled in Europe and would alone constitute a persecution of a terrible kind. The Gentile, however, is not the single Jew, they make it impossible for thousands of Jews to live, and it is largely they that have suffered the most serious and cruel blows among the German Jews.

Justice Denied to Jews

And yet they are only a part of the persecution. The laws that, theoretically, apply to all German citizens whether Gentile or Jew, in practice give the Gentile every possible advantage and the Jew every disadvantage. They prohibit the Gentile from the Jew but not the Jew from the Gentile. Thus a Gentile may libel a Jew with impunity, but not a Jew a Gentile, at least, not if easy the law is Nazi. Leader Regrets Poland Holds So Many Jews

But Miedzinski Says the Endek Campaign Is No Solution

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
WARSAW, Feb. 13.—The attitude of the Polish government regarding the Jewish question in Poland was revealed at today's session of the Sejm when Bodulaw Miedzinski, ex-minister and leader of the government party, "regretted" the high percentage of Jews in Poland and accused the Endeks (National Democrats) of having pursued "a valueless Jewish program."

"We too, regret the high percentage of Jews in Poland," ex-minister Miedzinski said in his polemic against the Endeks. "Poland is inhabited by minorities constituting thirty per cent. of the total population. Why-nilly we must care for them, and we regret the presence of 3,300,000 Jews in Poland."

Miedzinski then accused the Endeks, a definitely anti-Semitic party, of a lack of program regarding the Jewish question. "The Endeks, with only one per cent. of Jews, achieved only an insignificant Jewish emigration despite their anti-Semitic policy, their persecutions and their restriction campaign," the speaker said. "If the Endeks worked out a civilized, decent and practical solution of the Jewish question, I would accept it immediately and readily, but we categorically maintain that the Jewish program you have pursued up to the present is valueless, because in this way you cannot destroy the Jewish masses. Nor can you expel them, for no country today is admitting Jews."

Alliance Plans Culture Work

Executive Group of Workers' Body Initiates Movement

A plan for widespread cultural activities to be carried on in the various branches and clubs affiliated with the Jewish National Workers Alliance was recently formulated by the culture committee of the general executive of the Alliance and the work preparatory to the execution of the plan has been begun, it was announced yesterday.

Among the activities indicated in the plan are correspondence lectures on various subjects, instructions on the celebration of Jewish labor holidays, the organization of study and reading groups and the conduct of forums. The groups carrying out these plans will include the Alliance Women's Clubs, which are now carrying on an intensive campaign for the organization of new units. A number of such clubs were founded within the past few months in New York City, Mount Vernon and Richmond Hill, and Jewish women in a number of cities in the East are expected to follow suit shortly.

Women's clubs and Alliance branches of the metropolitan district will hold a conference on the subject of labor education tomorrow morning, February 25, at the Hotel New Yorker. Grilled Arab Reveals More

Abdul Mejid Contradicts Earlier Data in 'Confession'

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)

JAFFA, Feb. 13.—Defense counsel Horace Samuel, who is continuing his cross-examination of Abdul Mejid el Bendi Bikhari, youth leader of Arab who last week confessed that he murdered Dr. Chaim Arlosoroff, today extracted further contradictions from the witness, as well as many alleged details of the murder not mentioned by the widow, Mrs. Sima Arlosoroff, and other witnesses who testified earlier in the trial. Three Revolvers, Aha Achmimer, Abraham Stavsky and Zvi Rosenblatt, are accused of the crime.

Abdul Mejid first confessed, then withdrew his confession asserting that Stavsky and Rosenblatt offered him $1,000 to own his guilt of the crime.

The notes made by Colonel Reid during the examination of the Arab were read in court, revealing an interesting conversation between Abdul Mejid and Isaac Arwisch, fellow convict, who in the original confession was supposed to have fired the shots that killed Dr. Arlosoroff.

As Colonel Reid was reading his notes in which Abdul Mejid was quoted as saying "ask Stavsky and Rosenblatt, they killed with Achmimer's instructions," Achmimer jumped up from his place and excitedly shouted: "You are a liar and a murderer!"

II.
Nazi propagandists assert that since the War a huge mass of East European Jews have "fitted in" many and become with the help of the "Socialist Government" German citizens.

During the War the German Supreme Command (General Staff) ordered Poles and Lithuanians Jews to work in German mines or as unskilled workers. Some of them remained after the War. Some Jews from Russia, Poland and the Ukraine came to Germany before Bolshevism and pogroms. But in spite of all, the total number of Jews (German and foreign) residing in Germany decreased, from 1910 to 1925, from 615,021 to 564,379 (according to the official Census). In 1925, 99,000 foreign Jews resided in Germany; since then, on account of political and economic crisis, thousands of them have emigrated to France, South America, Palestine, etc. etc.

In 1933 there were, in fact, not more than 76,000 East European Jews in Germany and in nearly 65 million inhabitants.

The failure of the EER (Ethnic Relief League) to carry out its reformed anti-Semitic party which had carried on a strong campaign for its candidate, resulted in an increase of sympathy for the cause of the Jews. The followers of ex-Premier Venizelos supported the infuriated elements, although the Jews are now generally not associated with the EER and recently denounced them as monarchist traitors preparing a coup d'etat.

received no complaints from Jews in the city regarding looting or damages suffered during the disorders.

Fighting today out off the Jewish Home for the Aged from its kitchen meat supply since the Jewish League's kitchen is located in one of the districts in which the disorders are still continuing. From a dozen other points in Upper East Side, Jews have been driven through here, despite the veil of official silence, of strong Socialist resistance to the Dollfus forces.
