Urge a Balanced Structure For Reich Jews in New Life

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
BERLIN, March 25.—A warning that the occupational rehabilitation program being put into effect through the Central Committee of German Jewry for Reich and Reconstruction may result in the overcrowding of Jews in the crafts and agriculture was sounded today in the report of Jewish experts surveying the problem.

The report, in its conclusions, points out that one-third of the German Jews being rehabilitated should go into commercial occupations in order to maintain a normal occupational distribution. Staying the rehabilitation activities now in process, the report discloses that 6,600 Jews are now engaged in reconstruction activities at 1,282 collective training centers and 1,418 industrial centers. In addition to this number 2,369 young Jews are receiving occupational training through the Federation for the Support of the Training Jewish youth for settlement in Palestine.

Jews to the number of 2,739 are being trained to follow agricultural pursuits. This number includes 900 young Jews in training centers abroad for whom the Hechaltz is providing with the assistance of the Central Committee.

Few Professionals Ask Aid

The report brings out the curious fact that the classes expected to have the most urgent need of rehabilitation assistance — the academicians and professional men — form one of the smallest groups numerically among those undergoing reconstruction. The majority is made up of merchants, shopkeepers, women office workers, store assistants and others formerly in similar occupations. There

London Paper Charity Group Finds Anti-Nazi Again Headed Boycott Success By Proskauer

Nazi Minister Warns
'150% Nazis' Reich
Faces Trade Collapse

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
LONDON, March 25.—The Jewish boycott against German goods in various countries is working with devastating effect, according to the Sunday Express.

The Times, in reporting the speech of German Minister of Justice Hans Frank who sounded a warning against the 150 percent Nazis unable to get over the fact that Jews are still living in Germany, notes that the collapse of the Reich's foreign trade is causing great anxiety, for unless the country can export its manufactures it cannot import raw materials without which Hitler's campaign against unemployment must fail.

Such a failure would spell the end of the Nazi regime, the London newspaper points out.

Ex-King's Daughter Flees When Her Romance With Jewish Student Is Broken

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
WARSAW, March 25.—Agents employed by former-King Amanullah of Afghanistan arrived here today searching for the daughter of the former monarch who disappeared from Rome after the dismissal of her Jewish tutor, Edward Wollman. So far the search has been unsuccessful.

According to reports, the girl became enamored with Wollman, a Polish Jewish medical student, who was engaged by the daughter of the University of Berlin. Wollman went to Rome, where he was engaged by the former king to act as tutor.

A Warsaw Jewish daily published the story of the romance between the girl and the young Jewish student. The king immediately denied the reported engagement and declared that his daughter was not old enough to think of marriage.

Group Favors Consideration For Refugees Committee Appointed By Perkins Makes Recommendations

(Special to the J.D.B.)
WASHINGTON, March 25.—Special consideration for refugees "within the present quotas and without amendment to the law," as advocated in the recommendations of a committee of forty-eight men and women appointed several months ago by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins to study the immigration situation.

The report of the committee, headed by Carleton H. Palmer, recommended the retention of present immigration restrictions with only secondary relaxations. The report pointed out that two problems of considerable interest—admission of refugees and the resumption of families—could be met within the present immigration law structure.

Since its formation in 1917, the Federation has disbursed to its ninety-one affiliated institutions almost $35,000,000, of which $25,000,000 has been contributed by about $55,000,000.

For this reason the report urges

Says Reich Is Awake to Trade Peril

Montefiore States Nazis
Realize Jews' Loss
Is Their Own

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
LONDON, March 25.—Germany seems finally to have realized that the destruction of the economic life of the German Jews might entail the destruction of the whole German industrial system, Leonard Montefiore, president of the Anglo-Jewish Association, declared today in addressing a meeting of the organization.

He pointed out that the campaign of the Hago, Nazi organization, against combating Jews in trade, has been followed by a retreat both on the part of the organization and leading Nazi officials. He called attention to recent speeches by Chancellor Hitler and Minister of Justice Frank, both of whom said openly "that they would not allow any interference with trade by local Nazi officials or groups."

"Nevertheless," declared the president of the Anglo-Jewish Association, "there are no indications that the wide-spread anti-Jewish propaganda in Germany is decreasing. Der Stuermer and other Nazi organs are intensifying their campaign against firms employing Jews, demanding the dismissal of all Jews, which is impossible to accomplish. He gave explanations that there is no boycott against the Jews in Germany."

Nazis Attack All Jews
"The glowing indignation against Germany has diminished, but ample cause for indignation exists," Montefiore declared. "The Jews must realize that the Nazi attacks are directed against Jews in other countries of the world as much as against Jews who had the misfortune to be born in Germany and must continue to live there. We cannot stand still on this challenge."

"There is danger that publicity of the Jewish press may aggravate the position of the German Jews, since it gives the Nazis the chance to talk about 'international Jewry.'"

"We must accept the danger and not allow the cause to go by default." "The suspicion is absurd, for Jewish sentiment toward Germany was very friendly. We are defending not only the Jewish cause, but also liberty of press, speech, person, thought, and everything dear to Western civilization," Montefiore said.

"No self-respecting Jew will use German goods or services," the Anglo-Jewish leader continued, "but a public boycott does more harm than good. No doubt German foreign trade has been affected by the boycott, but the loss has been due to fluctuations of the exchange and the tariff barriers. Jewish merchants have undoubtedly contributed to the loss in German trade, but it is impossible to say how much," Montefiore declared.

Leonard Stein, chairman of the executive committee of the Anglo-Jewish Association, said that while he sympathized with the boycott, he was not of the opinion that Germany's trade decline was due to the boycott.

An Edison Letter

ALMOST twenty years ago I received a letter from Thomas A. Edison, which is of peculiar interest now. It was written in response to my inquiry regarding an article in which Edison had expressed his views on the role of the Jews in Germany during the first months of the World War. The Edison letter, dated Orange, N. J., November 13, 1914, follows:

"Your favor of the 9th instant was received. I think I cannot do better than to quote to you the reply I made yesterday to a letter to me by Mr. Jacob H. Schiff. It was as follows:

"Replying to your favor of the 9th instant let me say that I never saw the newspaper article you refer to, but I remember what I said and it was this: that the Jews are all the more to be regarded with the greatest advance of their nation in commercial prosperity, whereas the fact is that the military group that rules Germany had brains enough to take the advice of the great Jewish bankers and business men, and have the captains of industry a free hand, thus enabling them to build up the enormous industry of modern Germany. I instanced the Bleich-Roeders, Ballin, Rathenau and Loewe, and said that if one went down to the bottom of things in the great and most successful industries, one would dig up a Jew who furnished the ability that made them a success."

"Trusting the above will be a satisfactory reply to your inquiry, I remain

Yours very truly,

"THOS. A. EDISON"

The German military group which ruled Germany before and during the war had brains enough to allow the Jews to build up the enormous industry of modern Germany. If the German military group had also had brains enough to take the advice of Rathenau and Ballin "a Jew" would have been a World War, for these Jews would have cautioned them against the mad adventure.

After the War Rathenau worked hard to win back for Germany the honor, prestige and prosperity lost through the War, and while he was on the eve of rehabilitating Germany to the German people, he was murdered by a band of "Jewish youths." Albert Ballin, the genius who had built up the German shipping industry, and who had won the Kaiser to abandon submarine warfare, was driven to suicide by the ingratitude of his imperial friend, Walter Rathenau.

The same Hitler, the Austrian Jewish agitator, made himself himself dictator of Germany by the most extravagant promises to give bread with honor and marriage to the German people. But when Semitism constituted the major part of his program, now he is fulfilling his promises to crush the Jews, and in doing this he is at the same

New Jersey Acclaims Einsteins In Huge Newark Reception

(Special to the J.D.B.)
NEWARK, N. J., March 25.—The State of New Jersey today acclaimed Professor and Mrs. Albert Einstein at an elaborate affair testimonial in which 10,000 persons participated.

Following weeks of preparation by a committee of notables headed by Governor Moore, the program for the day featured a concert in the 113th Infantry Armory and a reception later, proceeded on schedule with the scientist, a modest and smiling center of attention, being escorted by a somewhat surprised over the fuss. A dinner in the evening concluded the day's activities.

Arriving from Princeton, where Dr. Einstein has been engaged in research at the Institute for Advanced Studies, the guests of honor were received by a cordon of Newark police led by Chief of Police James McRell and Deputy Chief John Harris. The party proceeded to the Armory where the concert got under way promptly.

In his address, which was read in German and later in an English translation by Rabbi Julius Silvergold of Temple Sinai, Abraham, Dr. Einstein paid tribute to the religious freedom of the United States.

J. N. F. Seeks $100,000 as Means of Setting Up Palestine Colony

Local Zionists will pay tribute to Moshe Ussishkin, veteran Zionist leader and world president of the Jewish National-Fund, on the occasion of his seventieth birthday, at a dinner to be held Wednesday, May 2, at the Astor.

According to an announcement by Dr. Israel Goldstein, J.N.F. head in this country, the affair will conclude a very wide effort to raise the sum of $100,000 which is to be used to establish the Kfar Ussishkin, a colony in Palestine.

As a means of raising the sum, donors of seventy cents will have their names inscribed on the Ussishkin Tribute roll. The latter will include a list of founders of the colony.

Couples attending the dinner will pay $50, the price of a dunam of Palestinian land. Donors will be presented with a certificate to the effect that they have "redeemed one dunam for the Kfar Ussishkin." The affair will take place in the grand ballroom of the Astor.

Arrangements Committee
Plans for the dinner are under the auspices of a dinner committee headed by Louis P. Rooker, banker. Honorary chairman include Rabbi Wolf Gold, president of Mishra; Mrs. Rose L. Halprin, Hahashah president; Joseph Kramer, East of the Order Sons of Zion; Morris Margules, secretary of the Zionist Organization of America; David Wertheim, secretary of the Pioneers Zion.

Abraham F. Wechsler is honorary treasurer and Mr. Louis Rimsky, treasurer. Dr. Goldstein also announced the acceptance of U. S. Senator Robert Wagner, Federal Judge Julian W. Mack, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Mrs. Rebekah Kohn, Rev. Dr. John Haynes Hoehn and Charles Edward Russell as the invitation of the committee to serve as honorary committee. The Citizens Sponsors committee for the dinner is now being formed.

Governor Herbert H. Lehman and Joseph J. Baker, president of the Jewish Hospital of Brooklyn, will serve as members of the committee of which Nelson Ruttenberg is chairman.

2,379 Families Aided by Group For Palestine

American Economic Committee Reports on Annual Work

Economic guidance was accorded last year to 2,379 European and American families by the American Economic Committee for Palestine, according to the annual report of Robert Szold, chairman of the board of directors.

These middle-class families number approximately 10,000 immigrants and prospective settlers in Palestine with known capital resources of more than $16,500,000, and potential capital estimated at over $20,000,000. Mr. Szold announced, pointing out that 1,486 of the families were actually in Palestine, and the remaining 893 corresponded with the committee's Palestine Bureau.

The organization is devoted to the encouragement of private initiative in the industrial, commercial and agricultural upbuilding of Palestine. Its American headquarters are located at 522 Fifth avenue. It publishes the Palestine Economic News.

"The prosperity prevailing in Palestine," Mr. Szold said, "is in no small measure due to the immigration of a considerable number of middle-class settlers possessing adequate financial resources and extremely valuable and successful industrial and commercial experience. The central clearing house for immigrant economic information, is acting, on behalf of the major development, business and farming organization of the country, the central clearing house for immigrant economic information."

Significance of Work
"The significance of the 1933 work of our Palestine Bureau will be more completely understood when it is realized that the 2,379 'capitalist' families guided by the American Economic Committee for Palestine brought or can bring with them into Palestine what under Palestine conditions is deemed large productive capital and that that capital can give and is giving employment to very many additional new immigrants."

"Many of the 2,379 families were German refugees and the jobs of many additional German immigrants based on the capital of the 2,379 families, 1,282 or fifty-four per cent, were from or in Germany. The peak of the committee's activity with and on behalf of German immigrants was reached in the second half of 1933 when the Bureau afforded guidance to 1,832 families. Of these, 1,136 were from or in Germany, as compared with a total of 497 families with 146 from or in Germany in the first six months."

Resulting Expansion
"The activities of these middle-class settlers have resulted not only in a remarkable expansion of existing economic undertakings in Palestine but in the establishment of new factories, trading firms and farms. The new undertakings include establishments already in operation or about to be launched for the manufacture of cement products and other building materials, chemicals, aluminum, apparel, drugs, metals, furniture, ice, leather, paints, shoes, textiles, toys and woodwork."

20 Years' Work Celebrated by Guild for Blind

Roosevelt, Lehman and Smith Praise Work in Messages

(Special to the J.D.B.)

YONKERS, March 25.—The twentieth anniversary of the New York Guild for the Jewish Blind was celebrated today at the Home Care, I. Montefiore Levy, president of the Guild, was the principal speaker.

Messages were read from President Roosevelt, Governor Lehman and former Governor Alfred E. Smith. President Roosevelt, in extending his greetings, declared that the anniversary "gives me a welcome opportunity to congratulate those responsible for the benevolent and humane work already accomplished. In spite of handicaps and difficulties of various kinds, the Guild has carried on. Its beneficiaries have become happier and more useful citizens."

"During all these years," Governor Lehman wrote, "you have rendered fine service to the community and brought solace and some degree of happiness into the lives of many sightless men, women and children." Mr. Smith, writing of his familiarity with the institution, offered his good wishes for the continuance "of your praiseworthy efforts in this time when the blind need help and assistance more than ever."

Reports were read by Jerome Lewine and Leonard M. Walstein, who is chairman of the forthcoming Guild concert which will present Marcia Bori and Alvin Spalding at Carnegie Hall on April 15.

The Guild, which was founded twenty years ago with an initial contribution of $500, has grown to the point where it expended last year $130,000 on behalf of the blind. It provides a home where the blind receive maintenance, education, training and medical care.

Jewish Design Will Be Motif For New Center

Insignia of Twelve Tribes of Israel Will Be En- graved on Columns

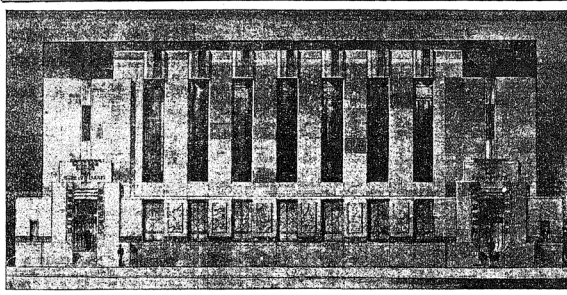

The new community center to be erected by the Congregation Hope of Israel at Gerard avenue and 160th street, the Bronx, will be strikingly Jewish in architecture and design, officials of the synagogue said today.

Abraham Goodman, architect and consultant on Jewish temple and synagogue structures, is planning a unique and outstanding building.

In the design for the building, the Menorah and Shofar motifs, as well as seven panels depicting the Biblical history of the creation of the world, will be used. The insignia of the twelve tribes of Israel will be engraved on columns on both sides of the central dome.

The building will contain a gymnasium and showers, class rooms, auditorium and a synagogue.

The Menorah and Shofar motifs and seven panels depicting the Biblical history of the world's creation will be used as a design for the new community center to be built by the Congregation Hope of Israel in the Bronx. The whole effect is expected to be distinctly Jewish in design.

Judaism As a Religion

Scoring "bargain-counter religion" in which adherents seek "universal insurance policy against all hurt," Dr. Stephen S. Wise characterized Judaism as "a religion that asks and takes" in his sermon "What Religion Asks of Us and What We May Ask of Religion" at Free Synagogue services held yesterday morning in Carnegie Hall.

"Religion," Dr. Wise declared, "must furnish a goal and motor power. It is the business of religion to teach men what to do and to do without. However, it must not teach wordy resignation, for then it abets social injustices."

"Religion gives us a self-measuring standard of life because it brings something unique to human aspiration—holiness."

"Unlike Christianity, Judaism does not furnish a certain, dogmatic explanation of the hereafter. Jews ask no guarantee. It would rather be of my people to whom immortal life is a supreme adventure, than have a dogmatic certificate of future life."

Dr. Wise enumerated three things which he said a man may not ask of religion. "He may not ask a roadmap of heaven, a guarantee against the difficulties of life, and a panacea for all wrongs."

"On the other hand the Jewish religious demands, in the words of Mishnah, that you do justice, love mercy, and walk humbly before God."

Dr. Wise decided as unjust the attempt of one race to try to enslave others. He ridiculed neo-mysticism "which is neither new nor mystic, which looks upward, not outward, and ignores human nature."

Old Testament and New Times
Although in recent years attempts have been made to ridicule the Old Testament, the sentiments expressed therein are still new, declared Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson in his Sabbath sermon before the congregation of Temple Emanuel, Fifth avenue and Sixty-fifth street.

Discussing the possible reasons for the attacks on the Old Testament, Dr. Goldenson declared that, as "the only fair way of judging men is by taking away judiciously a part of them, but by looking at them in the direction in which they are moving, in precisely the same way the Old Testament is to be judged."

"There is a degree of books, all on the same level of expression, of genius, of idealism or lack of idealism," he continued. "It took a thousand years to produce the Bible, and possibly thousands of minds have contributed to the making of it." In the present crisis, he said, "We have turned to the Bible and found a God whom we may worship."

He cited passages in the Books of Malachi, Isaiah and Jeremiah which could be applied to current problems, and quoted a sentence from Amos. "The Twentieth Century," he declared, "is just beginning to enter into the conception of society that 2,600 years ago Amos the shepherd boy had described."

"The sad thing is that you and I do not know our heritage, or what is worse, do not care," Rabbi Goldenson concluded. "That is the tragedy of Israel. The Twentieth Century is just beginning to incorporate into its life some of the insight of the Bible."

Obstacles to Unity

Discussing the problem of Jewish unity, Professor Mordecai M. Kaplan, in his sermon before the Sunday morning forum of the Society for the Advancement of Judaism, 15 West Eighty-sixth street, declared, "The most formidable obstacle to Jewish unity is a wrong state of mind which Jews have developed concerning the proper agencies for Jewish public activity."

"They have been trained by their leaders to be institutionally-minded instead of communally-minded," he explained. "Most lay leaders of the particular institutions which happen to be their hobbies above the interests of an integrated and spiritually creative Jewish people."

"The sixth commandment, 'Thou shalt not kill,' should never be paraphrased by man, declared Rabbi William F. Rosenblum at Temple Israel, 210 West Ninety-first street. "There is no place for murder in a human society that seeks to become part of the divine pattern," he said.

Taking the example of the Scottsboro case in Alabama, he declared that no one acquainted with the record would pretend that there "exists no doubt as to the guilt of the Scottsboro boys for the crime they are alleged to have perpetrated upon the two white girls in questions. I, for one, believe the Scottsboro boys are innocent of the crime with which they are charged. A jury composed of white men and women who have fed upon the prejudices of the South can hardly be expected to clear itself of reasonable doubt. There is no reason to the Scottsboro verdict. It should be set aside."

New Center to Use Jewish Design

Attacks Dickens' "Life"

That the recently-published story by Charles Dickens, "The Life of Our Lord," continues the ancient legend of Jewish guilt was the assertion of Rabbi Louis I. Newman in his sermon before Congregation Rodef Shalom, 7 West Eighty-third street.

The book, he said, "adds nothing to our knowledge of Jesus of Nazareth and merely reinforces the ancient legend of Jewish guilt in the death of the Rabbi of Galilee. There is no particular distinction of style and the story will always be considered one of the minor works of Dickens. There is the same tendency to isolate Jews from the people which bore and nurtured him; the same desire to emphasize the miracles and the miracles, the same emphasis upon Jewish hostility to the teachings of Jesus. The 'Life of Our Lord' is merely a rewriting of the Gospel story without any attempt at scientific criticism and analysis. It adds nothing to Dickens' fame, and in fact tends to detract from it."

Dickens might have rendered a service to historical and literary research if he had depicted the true Jesus, Rabbi Newman added. "The publication at this season of the year of the Dickens story does nothing to improve our understanding of the essentially Jewish message of Jesus of Nazareth," he declared. "The unremitting emphasis upon the morbid and unhappy end of Jesus on the cross has served to encourage hostility and hatred against the very people whose blood Jesus bore in his veins."

Two goals are indispensable for the ultimate freedom and happiness of the Jew, Rabbi Israel Goldenson declared in his sermon on "Preparing for Freedom" before Congregation B'nai Jehshurun, Eighty-eighth street, West of Broadway.

"There are two fronts on which the Jewish problem must be solved," he explained. "First, through the establishment of economic and social justice in the lands where he lives, will be removed the chief prop of anti-Semitism which has been the unjust economic order and its consequent evils. Second, through the establishment of a Jewish homeland in Palestine where Jewish immigration will be unrestricted as it should be in the Jewish homeland, millions of our Jews will have a place where to achieve physical and spiritual well being and the Jewish people as a people will have a new dignity in the eyes of the world."

Message of the Sabbath
During the period immediately before Easter, the Jew is reminded of the great Sabbath and its message. Rabbi Joseph Zeitlin declared in his sermon before Temple Anshe Chesed, West End avenue.

Non-Jewish Zionist Is Mourned In Detroit; Championed Liberty

By PHILIP SLOMOVITZ
(J.D.B. Special Correspondence)

DETROIT, March 22.—The death of George B. Catlin, Michigan historian and librarian of Detroit News at the age of seventy-six recalls the deep interest that this Christian scholar took in Zionist affairs and in Jewish matters generally.

Many notables of Michigan, together with a host of friends, joined in paying tribute to this eminent newspaperman and scholar for his genius in historical fields.

Two letters addressed to the writer by him reveal how patriotic his genius actually was.

On August 12, 1933, two days after his seventy-sixth birthday, he acknowledged greetings in a letter in which he condemned race prejudice and religious fanaticism.

"As we grow old we find a flood of memories rising about us at each birthday, and sometimes we grow weary and wondering as we see the present generation grappling with problems which have been constantly recurring through all the ages, and seeming to have learned nothing from the experiences of earlier generations.

"Spain's religious fanatics put a terrible blight upon the nation more than 400 years ago when she expelled the Jews and the Moors, and Hitlerism, regardless of that demonstration, is repeating the outrageous folly, after a fashion of its own. I look upon the present folly as a passing phase of history, for religious fanaticism and race prejudice do not belong anywhere in the 20th century of this era."

Later he wrote: "Though a Christian, I am heartily in sympathy with it (Zionism). There are several excellent reasons for its promotion and two of these stand out very prominently. Possession of Palestine in peace has been the dream of the Jewish people since the time of Moses—a dream as yet unfulfilled but kept alive and active by successive prophecies and by the undying hope and faith of a wonderful race which has earned the right to existence as a nation. The fulfillment of that dream would bring joy and renew hope in the hearts of a great multitude of Russian, Polish and other Jews who live among people who are more or less hostile to them. I would not expect much of an exodus from the United States or England, where prejudice is vanishing beyond prospect of revival, but as I look at the situation in the light of history and experience, the Jews of Russia and Poland seem to be facing a peril."

Rabbi Pleads Jewish Students Be Allowed To Observe Sabbath

(Special to the J.D.B.)
CINCINNATI, March 25.—Rabbi Eliezer Silver, chief rabbi of the United Orthodox Congregations here, is circulating public officials throughout the country with a plea that Jewish college students, particularly those studying medicine, be given an opportunity to observe their Sabbath without discrimination.

United States Senators, governors of states with state universities, college presidents and others, have received from Rabbi Silver a copy of the letter he sent to United States Commissioner of Education William J. Cooper, urging that curricula be arranged so that Jewish students will not be called upon to violate the Sabbath.

Utica Organizing Community Council

Plan Is to Unify Varied Local Activities of Jewry

(Special to the J.D.B.)
UTICA, March 25.—A Jewish Community Council, consisting of nearly all religious, social, fraternal and charitable organizations in the city, has been organized here under the leadership of Rabbi S. Joshua Kohn of Temple Beth El, Judge H. Myron Lewis and Isaac Zaks, president of the oldest local orthodox congregation.

The aim of the Council is to promote all phases of the Jewish community life in Utica, and unify the various Jewish causes here and abroad. Once a year it will conduct a drive for national and international purposes, such as relief for the German Jewry and the upbuilding of Palestine.

The present plan of the Council permits every Jew in Utica, irrespective of age, to join, provided he has paid his annual dues. The dues, which will amount to several thousands of dollars a year, will be used solely for local, educational, religious and social activities.

Brandeis Views Seen Similar to Those of President Roosevelt

(Special to the J.D.B.)
COLUMBUS, March 25.—Prof. Robert E. Mathews, of the Ohio State University law faculty, told the graduating class of the University that statements expressed by Associate Justice Louis D. Brandeis, of the U. S. Supreme Court, in his book "Our Peoples' Money," are strikingly similar to the philosophy behind President Roosevelt's recovery program.

He said the "extent of the coincidence would be incomplete without reminding ourselves that it is this same man who will sooner or later be one of the nine who must together pass judgment on the constitutionality of the new deal."

Love of Learning Unites World Jews

So Says Dr. Gamoran at the Buffalo Jewish Teachers' Gathering

(J.D.B. Special Correspondence)
BUFFALO, March 23.—The reason for the survival of the Jews is that they have a common love for learning, Dr. Emanuel Gamoran of Cincinnati, education director of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations told the members of the Buffalo Jewish Teachers' Association at the closing session of the two-day conference held at Temple Beth-El.

"After the destruction of the second temple the Jewish people were scattered all over the earth," he said. "They had no ecclesiastical or political organization to hold them together. All they did have in common was their love of learning. In the year 64 of this era, Rabbi Joshua Ben Gamala in Palestine ordered that there should be established community provision for the education of children from the time they were six years old. This was the first system of universal education created anywhere. In effect it was also the first compulsory educational system."

At a previous session held at Temple Beth Zion, Nathan Brilliant, director of the Euclid Avenue Temple in Cleveland, spoke. He told of a new system of teaching which is in the experimental stage in the Cleveland Temple school. The system is based on the placing of responsibility for learning on the pupil himself.

Officers elected for the coming term are: Emanuel Gamoran, President; Rabbi Joseph Gitlin, President; Uriah Z. Engelmann, chairman of the executive committee; Sylvan Wagner, Vice President; William Sugerman, Secretary and Herbert Hyman, Treasurer.

Among those in charge of the conference were Dr. Ben M. Edlin, director of the bureau of Jewish education of Buffalo; Louis T. Mason, Rabbi Joseph Gitlin and Reuben J. Magil and Joseph L. Fink.

Blind Stitches Machine Inventor Seeks to Divert Nazi Trade Here

American Clothing Trade, Mostly Jewish, No Longer Buys Tools in Munich

How millions of American dollars heretofore going to Germany will now be diverted to America, the United States is the subject of a story that was told by Julius Bruno, president of the United States Blind Stitches Corporation, with plant and offices at 359 Seventh avenue.

Bruno, an Italian who became an American citizen when he enlisted in the United States Army in 1917, in the 77th Artillery, known as "the Cloak and Sultans", has perfected machinery which produces enough machines to take care of the huge demand for blind stitches throughout the United States. Until Hitler came into power in Germany, and for some time after it, the United States was the principal source of blind stitches machines from Germany, principally Munich, the birthplace of the Nazi party and the center of Third Reich's sewing-machine industry.

The blind stitch, Bruno explained, is one of the most common kinds of commercial sewing, although formerly regarded as by its rightful name. It is a stitch which can be seen on only one side (the inner side) of a garment. It is used on all kinds of clothing.

"While the value of American imports of these German machines can not be determined accurately, it is understood that yearly many millions of dollars worth of goods in order to supply the huge American clothing trade with Bavarian-made blind stitch apparatus."

"Today," Bruno says, "it is so unnecessary to order from Hitler's Germany. This is particularly gratifying to the American clothing trade. I believe that about 90 per cent of the blind stitch Americans using the blind stitch equipment are of Jewish descent."

Hitler and the Jews

"When Hitler came into power, to foresee the consequences of his cruel and stupid persecution of the Jews. I knew that, here, Jews would no longer care to trade with the Nazi Government, and mainly to be loyal to my hundreds of thousands of Jews who began work on my present plant."

"Day and night, my brother Max and I worked on dyes and tests. The labor was heart-breaking. We worked for months before we were able to find a proper grade of steel, and when we did perfect one, we were gratified to find it was purchased a little better than the German brand. Our discovery meant that the American steel industry would send hereafter rather than the Jew."

"We cast and re-cast parts hundreds or thousands of times, and each time we tried that we should save the time to attain the perfect and hardest of the German parts. But part by part we succeeded in putting together my machine."

"You see this?" he queried as he passed it over. "There are one hundred sixty parts in it, and upon the strength and quality of every part the worth of the machine depends. Every part of the machine is made of material in it, and every bit of the labor that went into its manufacture is American. It is an American blind stitch machine. It is a victory," he exclaimed.

Bruno said that it was not until two months ago that he was able to perfect the machine, but now he said that American customers prefer it to those of German make. His profit, he added, is slight because he must meet competition from the German market.

Bruno charged that German parts and machines are still being imported into the United States. He produced a box of parts of cently purchased from a rival concern, and pointed out that the label, "Made in Germany" had been impressed on the inside of most parts where it could not readily be seen. "The Germans are duping the American trade," he said, "and to some extent the trade is duping the people. He added, however, "But my machine is now recognized as a success. We'll show this fellow, Hitler!"

"I feel certain," he said, "that German exports of these machines will cease almost entirely, when the trade learns that these machines have been duplicated in this country."

Step Right Up Everybody! Meet a Swell Fellow(s)—Himself

By PHILIP MACK

In his own parlance, "he's colossal, he's mammoth, he's super-human—he's a swell guy."

Step right up this way, ladies and gentlemen, and we'll introduce you to Dexter Fellows, one of the most amazing and astounding creatures that ever roamed the plains of North America. He has been seen in the Vieux Carré of New Orleans; he has chatted with fellers in his general store of Deerledge, Montana; he has basked on the sunny shores of California and has played the rockbound coasts of Maine. Step right this way, ladies and gentlemen.

Dexter Fellows, to residents of small towns and villages a tidings-carrier of jubilee drums and a New York the harbinger of Spring, and to his employers, the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus, the greatest ballyhoo artist of all time, is right here in New York, in our very midst.

Quiet Fellow's (he says) is a Somebody one associate's publicity man for the Greatest Show on Earth with blaring brass bands, the trumpeting of nostalgic elephants, the roar of impatient lions, pink lemonade, red popcorn, hot dogs, sawdust, the hullabaloo of migrant canvases covered spectacles and general turmoil.

Well, we were disillusioned when, on calling on the famous public relations man the other day, we found him a rather quiet fellow, lodged in modest rooms at the Cumberland Hotel. He speaks softly with only a faint touch of the raucous voice of the ballyhoo expert to mark his profession. His wife, soft voiced and retiring, was reading a book.

Because the circus will not open at Madison Square Garden for another week or so, he discussed but lightly the new numbers. He was far more interested in talking about old friends—and they are legion—scattered from Singapore to Warsaw. His friends, outside of those whom he so successfully exploits as "the marvel of the century" or "the sensation of all time," are mainly newspapermen.

While many statements at the present moment are giving voice to their particular feelings for the preservation of Democracy, we herewith timidly advance our own reasons for the belief that Democracy can not fail to carry.

God be thanked for our American sense of humor, for we believe that in this and in this alone lies the future security of our present personal liberties of life. It is our greatest assurance of spiritual friendship between the peoples of this country.

Much as we should like to claim authorship for the idea that Fascism, Hitlerism or absolute dictatorship can never overpower the American sense of humor, we can not in all honesty do so. "The observation was originally made to us by an American official in Berlin. We had been discussing some of the features of the German Embassy near a window in a high (four story) building overlooking Unter den Linden when the question was asked, "Could America go to Berlin?"

"Let's have a look at Fascism," my friend suggested, and together we peered into the main artery of the Fascist circulatory system. The street was literally draped with swastikas, although it was no holiday.

"Outside of war time can you imagine the American people buying, washing, and holding flags for no particularly patriotic purpose?" he asked, and I couldn't answer.

The street contained many persons in the brown uniform of the Nazi party, and he inquired, "Do you think that grown men in American cities and villages would wear day in and day out uniforms such as we see below? And do you think that the townspeople, who make such great sport of the uniforms of doormen and ushers, could look upon such people without laughing?"

Even from our height we could see plainly the expressions of responsibility that creased the features of brownshirts and those whose Nazi badges on civilian lapels. Their swagger, their officious heel-clicking, their mechanical and authoritative salutes as they passed, caused us to smile.

Presently long lines of brown-jacketed children ranging six to eighteen years of age paraded past. They were on their way to hear long winded lectures on patriotism which are given daily by members of the party. Could American kids be dragged from their play and leisure for such a purpose? Once, perhaps—but regularly, never. We wondered, "If a Jewish boy did his share in maintaining friendly relations with his group would he be shunned by his companions merely because his parents came from a particular part of the globe? It would be hard to believe this of American children. And would they consent to sacrifice their precious play hours to be drilled and disciplined so that one day they march upon and kill children of a neighboring country whom they had never met? And would they never tire of greeting one another in the name of another citizen, whose significance and policies their childish minds could never grasp?"

We wondered if American university students, like these bespectacled fellows who marched so seriously to Berlin University would consent to listen to lectures in courses which allow for no discussion whatsoever or discussion only wherein one might salute with greater humor the distorted facts advanced by professors who fear to speak the truth, who recite the thoughts of the distorted mind of a Fuehrer. Would they not laugh outright at the catatonic of absurdities it became their duty to learn?

We wondered if people would withdraw to secluded places to tell funny stories relative to the current administration. And we wondered if even one important newspaper in America could print obnoxious mistrials, neglect news stories of great importance or laud editorially what they regarded as the doubtful benefits of government without inviting ridicule, rebuke and reaction from the rest of the press. We wondered whether a uniformed party man might snatch a cigarette from the pretty mouth of an American woman without some editorializing to champion her right to smoke and others galling or otherwise, laughing outright.

We decided that America must laugh, and when one can laugh at a person it is hard to hate him. Without uncompromising hate one can't have Hitlerism. We decided that America will have to forego Hitlerism.

Many Eulogize Memory of Rabbi Enelow

Final Services Held Yesterday at Temple Emanu-El

Scholar, rabbi, minister, friend all joined yesterday to pay tribute to the memory of the late Rabbi Hyman Gerson Enelow, of Temple Emanu-El, who died last month. Services were conducted at the Temple.

"Dr. Enelow's life was taken up mainly with three tasks: that of rabbi, of teacher and of scholar," declared Professor Alexander Marx, of the Jewish Theological Seminary in his address eulogizing the late Rabbi. Confining himself to Dr. Enelow's scholastic achievements, Dr. Marx said, it was his inspiration which caused two of his intimate friends to establish chairs of Jewish learning at Harvard University and at Columbia. It was during his presidency of the Central Conference of American Rabbis that the Littauer Fund for the subvention of learned pupils was established, which, under his guidance, did much for the promotion of Jewish learning.

"His untimely and tragic death," Professor Marx concluded, "leaves a great gap. Those of us who had the privilege to come close to that noble, modest and retiring man, will forever cherish his memory."

Samuel M. Newburger, chairman of the board of trustees of Rabbi Enelow's work in the Sunday school. His force of character, his great love of children and of young people, his generous capacities, his abilities, had outstanding opportunity," Mr. Newburger declared.

"To the young people he was an inspiration, and they longed to understand him, they loved and admired him. His memory will be a staff of strength to them in their future life."

Many Speakers
Other speakers at the services were Irving Lehman, president of the congregation, Rev. Dr. Malcolm J. Macleod, of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas and Rabbi William E. Rosman of Congregation Ohab Shalom, Baltimore. Among those who offered prayers were Rabbi Nathan A. Perlman, associate rabbi of Temple Emanu-El; Rabbi Joseph B. Wise, president of the Association of Reform Rabbis of Greater New York; Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson, rabbi of Congregation Emanu-El, and Rabbi Nathan Stern of the New York Board of Jewish Ministers.

Untermeyer, Dickstein Called Agitators by Nazi Paper

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
BERLIN, Mar. 25.—The Untermeyer, president of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, and Congressman Samuel Dickstein should be considered carefully whether they are furthering work in the direction of the fact that Jewish machinations are inciting the nations one against the other, the Leugenabwehr, a Nazi paper, declared in an editorial attack upon the two American Jewish personalities.

Characterizing Untermeyer and Dickstein as "Hetzjuden" (Jewish agitators), the newspaper alleges that the former's organization is spreading false news of the anti-Jewish boycott in order to influence the Zionist Actions Committee, which plans to meet in Jerusalem next month to proclaim a worldwide boycott of Germany.

As a matter of fact, the newspaper declares, the anti-Jewish boycott has been forbidden by responsible leaders.

Acclaim Einsteins In New Jersey Fete

"We notice with deep gratitude that in this land the sense of justice, humanitarianism and tolerance is still alive. So long as such traditions are rooted in the people, we need harbor no painful worries about its future healthy development."

Expresses His Gratitude
"Deeds of noble philanthropy do not only bring blessings to those to whom help and new possibilities for living are given, but react mainly upon those from whom this help emanates. For working together, for noble deeds, is the communal spirit upon which rests the blossoming and permanence of every community. I thank all those who have contributed to the success of this day's humanitarian enterprise."

Governor Moore said in part: "Many of you have no conception of the Einstein theory. Neither have I. But I do know that the world has acclaimed this remarkable savant for his humanly sympathetic nature and childlike trust and faith. I deem his friendship one of my priceless possessions."

Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver who came by plane from his home in Cleveland, said:

"He has always brought defense and courage to a defenseless people and has stood true and tried to the classic tradition of justice and reasonableness which the new barbarism is threatening to inundate in our day."

The Standard Bearer
"He represents the classic view of life, a standard bearer wise and intrepid, fighting for all of us in the struggle for liberalism against exclusion."

Rabbi Julius Silberman of Temple B'nai Abraham here repeated the invocation, and Rabbi Reuben Kaufman of Peterson, president of the New Jersey Rabbinical Association, pronounced the invocation at the dinner.

The concert artists included Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, who arrived from the coast to sing at the affair, Giovanni Martintelli, tenor, and Ossip Gabrilowitch, pianist.

Extol Scientist
In the evening the famous couple repaired to the Mosque Ballroom where speakers, including Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, president of the New Jersey Rabbinical Association, pronounced the invocation at the dinner.

Consideration for Refugees Favored

The report declared that "our immigration laws have met the challenge of the depression" by "special consideration at this time," permitting drastic reductions in immigration and "yet have retained flexibility adapted to changing conditions."

Will Continue Present Policy
It pointed out that the committee saw no reason for substantial amendment at this time and asserted the belief that the present policy of restriction should be continued.

With regard to reunion of families, the report stated: "The committee believes however, that the family constitutes the foundation and strength of our society and that the right of husband and wife, parents and children to be united cannot be disregarded. We are therefore recommending that proper provision be made for reunion of families."
Other recommendations of the committee included waging of an unceasing war against alien criminals, provision for legal assistance for deserving liberal entrance opposition to deportation of aliens brought here as children and adequate educational facilities for Americanization of immigrants.

During the month of April 9,000 Jews will be brought into the scope of the reconstruction work, making a total in excess of 15,000 being prepared for existence under altered conditions of Nazism. Of this number 10,000 will be trained in commercial pursuits in keeping with the recommendations of the experts.

Others of those being trained are paying their own expenses. Five thousand are dependent upon relief work.
During 1933 the central committee for Jewish Relief and Reconstruction expended $700,000 marks on its program. The budget for the first six months of 1934 amounts to approximately $900,000 marks (approximately $200,000).

Christ 'Aryan Galilean' Mission Was to Destroy Judaism, Avers Preacher

(Special Correspondent J.T.A.)
BERLIN, March 25.—Christ was an "Aryan Galilean" and his mission was to destroy the Jewish religion, the Weltanschauung of the Jews, the new "German People's Church," declared a preacher during the course of a full manifestation of the growing popularity of the religion he established.

time destroying the industries which the Jews had built up for Germany.
The rise of Hitler in Germany and the menace of Hitlerism to the world have been debated by many students of international affairs. One of the most interesting definitions now comes from Prince Hubertus Loewenstein, in his new book entitled "The Tragedy of a Nation—Germany, 1918-1934." He says of Hitler:

"He is the incorporated sham rezece style that has still an attraction for certain sections of the German people, and on the lines of this sham rezece all points of Herr Hitler's program can be explained. His Socialism is that of the industrialists of the Nineties . . . His Nationalism is an echo of Bismarck in the uniform of a grenadier, and his reconstruction of the State is as an old Frenchman would not recognize it. But everything is wrapped in vague and misty ideas that must appear to emit the tremulous light of creativeness; and with rare skill, as a politician, he has been able to attract the attention of an idealist and a good bourgeois he has the courage to utter rubbish and lies."

Prince Loewenstein is less surprised that the German people should be duped by him than that other nations should be hoodwinked. He writes:

"The countries of Europe, with the one exception of France, accept all these endorsements of Hitler's seriously even when they are in obvious contradiction to his deeds. . . . The world will go with the Nazis feel strong enough to let loose another European war."

Prince Loewenstein convinced that Hitler and his Nazis are striving toward war, says:
"Between the lines of all peace orations destined for foreign consumption the doctrine can be discerned that salvation lies only in a new war . . . In Germany the amount of ammunition is towering higher, while enormous cellars are being built up for the storing of extremely expensive poisonous gases."

Prince Loewenstein might have included the poisonous gas of hate that Hitlerism is exporting to other lands in his war against the Jews who had helped to build up Germany's industries and culture.

Jewish War Vets End War Convention

Members From All Parts of New York State Held Business Session, Dinner

The Jewish War Veterans last night concluded their annual state convention, which was marked by a large attendance of members from all parts of New York state during two days of business and festive sessions.

On Saturday night the annual banquet was held in Hunt's Hotel, Palace at 163rd street and Southern boulevard, and during most of Sunday veterans crowded the largest meeting rooms of the same hotel for the purpose of plans for activities during the coming year.

Among those who addressed the convention were Herman Bernstein, former Minister to Albania; Cusack, Borough President George U. Harvey; County Judge Harry Stackill, and Bronx Borough President J. J. Lyons.

Shortly after two o'clock yesterday afternoon I. Edgar Hestegard and alternates retired to Pelham Bay Park, where they placed a wreath at the World War Memorial Grave Monument. J. David Delman, state commissioner, officiated at the ceremony.

Aldermanic President Bernard S. Deutsch sent a message expressing regret at inability to attend.

Rabbi Pool Scores Humans for Evil

Asserts in Radio Address God Is Not to Be Blamed for Us

Speaking on the Church of the Air program broadcast over Columbia Broadcasting System network, Rabbi David de Solà Pool, of the Temple Beth Shalom Synagogue, rebuked human being for not taking advantage of all opportunities offered them.

"What has man done so often with the stuff of life, given to him so bountifully by God?" Dr. Pool asked. "We cannot blame God for the human hunger that exists while man hurra because of its excess, and pour milk into rivers because there is too much of it." "We cannot blame God for those who are bare and ragged and cold while vast fields of cotton are plowed under. We cannot blame God for the slums and fetreap which men have reared for home while earth yields its profusion of wood and metals and sunshine and air."

"We cannot blame God for the gangster's machine gun, naval de struction, the poison gas, the use of all the hellish instruments of man's fiendish ingenuity. The world is hunger and want, of ugliness and poverty, of greed and destruction—this is the world not that God has made but that man has made."
