When Zionists Disagree

THE failure of the Actions Committee of the World Zionist Organization to establish a united front in Zionist work is extremely deplorable. All factions were not big enough to make concessions for the purpose of attaining unity. Each group apparently insisted upon its own maximum program for the rehabilitation of Palestine. The result was not a victory for any particular fac-tion. It is a defeat for Jewish

An American journalist, Doug Brinkley, spent fourteen months in Germany and is now lectur-ing in this country on Hitler-lsm. He is enthusiastic in his praise of Hitler and Hanfstaenel, his lieutenant. He assures is audiences that during his stay in Germany he neither saw nor heard of a case of cruelty or brutality. He found no Jews in the concentration camps, even though it was recently made public in Germany that Hitler had ordered "the closing of twenty penal institutions where the Jews received the worst treatment."

The American journalist saw only "happy, contented faces" in Germany. He found Hitler "al-most infallible," and he described Hitlerism as "an era of justice and peace." In his opinion the and peace." WASHINGTON, April 6.—The long list of activities marking the development of Pascist organizations during the past year was cli-maxed today when Charles Kramer, California member of the Congressional committee to investigate Nazi activities in the United States, disclosed in an exclusive statement to this reporter evidence that the United States military forces had been corrupted by Fascist bands operating in Southern California.

Kramer charges that bribes have been offered and to some extent accepted by United States Army officers in Fascist schemes to over-throw the American Government. While he would name neither those

for Blind Is Unaware of Crony's Death

Starting on his second century today, Joshua Finkelstein, blind but che ry, wants naught but his pipe and a tin of fragrant tobacco.

"Grandpa," as his cronies at the Yonkers Home of the New York Guild For the Jewish Blind like to call him, is the oldest inmate of the Home, but he is not aware of it. Last October, when he rose to the position of patriarch on the death of his dearest friend, Hirsch Smulowitz, it was deemed inad-visable to inform Grandpa. After all, his heart isn't as strong as it used to be "Good old Hirsch," Joshua would say, "there was a friend for you. Too bad he had to go to another institution for treatment." For he thinks that his friend is still living and is being treated for ailing feet and is being treated for aiming feet at another institution. "Will Hirsch be at my party today?" he asked. No, Grandpa, Hirsch can't come. His feet hurt little more than usual today. Maybe next year,

Reminisces on Kishinev
Usually he sits quietly in a corner smoking a pipe. He day-dreams often. Sometimes he grows excited at the memory of the Kishinev massacres which he witressace before his sight failed.
"Mama! They're breaking the chairs!" he mutters brokenly, "Oy, Gott the dirty muzhiks!" He lives again through the pogrom in which his inn, his sole means of support, was razed to the ground. He trembles and brandishes his cane at the invisible foe.

The meeting will be followed by the opening of an exhibit of Jew-ish contributions to art in the museum of the Seminary.

JOSHUA FINKELSTEIN

For him there is a real foe. He refuses to venture outdoors, for he fears the imminent attack. The massacre is the most poignant picture in his memory.

"A birthday party for me?" he asks modestly when informed his centenary is being celebrated to-day, "So much bother for me?" It seems to him that he must have passed the century mark-well, at least four or five years ago. But he admits that his memory isn't what it used to be.

So, at three o'clock this after-noon, "Grandpa's" numerous prog-eny and friends will sit around the table while he feels the heat of 101 cheery, blazing candles atop a birthday cake. Granda commences his second century. He sees not the banal world, but his own. He is blind but content.

'We Humans' on Radio Today-Deals With the Situation in Germany

The radio version of "We Humans," a one-act play dealing with the Nazi situation, originally scheduled for last Friday, was scheduled for last Friday, was postponed until today, and will be presented over station WNYC at three o'clock. Abraham I. Leven-son, the author, will direct the performance.

PASSOVER SERMONS

Newman on Immortality "Immortality is a persistent hu-man idea, but the twentieth century men and women must be contented, not with iron-clad guarantees, but with poetic abstractions regarding the future life," said Rabbi Louis I. Neuman in a Passover sermon to Congregation Ro-deph Shalom Friday morning. Rabbi Newman counseled full development of innate capacities In this way, he said, by leaving behind us the memory of our works, we may become immortal

"Merely to have existed, merely to have an integer in the great universal system is also a form of eternality with which modern men and women may consider themselves satisfied. Whatever follows need not make us anxious. Life contains its own purgatories for punishment, and its own hea-vens for rewards. We must not demand that they exist unendingly."

The Service of Women "In supporting the synagogue as well a in the rebuilding Palestine the woman has been conspicuous," said Rabbi Jacob Katz in a sermon to the Monteflore Hebrew Congregation in the Bronx Friday.

"The woman," Dr. Katz ex-plained, "was given a position of recognition in Jewish history. Her contributions have been inestim-able. In ancient days, Moses sang first and Miriam followed, Today she has the opportunity of leading in the victory of spiritual life through the institution of the synagogue and the school."
"Would that all religions might

"Let it be said for Judaism. Dr. Goldstein went on, "that it ha been the first of the great world religions to have sounded the values of human brotherhood and to have conceived of the whole of humanity as one great family under the Fatherhood of God.

Irvington is reputed to be a hot-bed of Nazi activity. The Friends of New Germany are said to hold regular meetings at a hall here. The movements of a local Protes-tant minister are being watched by investigators, it is said.

The current campaign for the town commissioners' election, to take place on May 8, also has a bearing on the Nazi situation here. The German-American League of Essex County, which represents the major German societies of Irvington, Newark and North Jersey. has thrust itself into the political campaign by endorsing four of the thirty candidates. The four the thirty candidates. The four endorsed candidates are Charles H. Schroeder, Elmer Hausmann, Edward Ballentine and Percy Miller.

At the last such election, held four years ago, no such endorsement was given. The campaign committee of the endorsed candidates is headed by William Heuer.

Negotiations are now under way between the German government and our own for a new commercial treaty. The American Ambassa-dor to Germany is now in Washington for that purpose. A subtle propaganda has been set in motion to persuade the American people that the Nazi government has al-ready relented on its anti-Jewish and that it has made important concessions to the out-raged public opinion of the world. While it is conceded that "evidence of moderation will be hard to dis cover," it is only because the leaders are still under pressure from the rank and file. The advice is therefore deftly insinuated that it is advisable to ease up on criticism of the Nazi regime in the hope that still further concessions may be forthcoming.

Indeed, it is undoubtedly true that but for the vigorous expression of American opinion the German camarilla would have gone much further in their arti-Semitic comparism. The their anti-Semitic campaign. The difficulty, so far, has been that the attitude of people outside Germany towards the Hitler policy is almost unknown in Germany. The gen-eral public of Germany is in the first place unaware of the acts of first place unaware of the acts of violence and aggression which take place in various parts of the coun-try, always 'unofficial,' and sec-ondly the views of people beyond the German frontier are not per-mitted to appear; and if they do, they are printed merely for the though the printed merely for the they are printed merely for the they are printed merely for the thing of the printed merely are the visit of the day in Italy by German visitor, told we, that singe counter visitor told me that since coming

way from his country he was sur

criticism and such untruths about Germany's attitude toward the Jews.

"For myself," he said, "I have no anti-Semitic views. I have many Jewish business friends. I many Jewish business friends. I have not cut their acquaintance." "Good," I replied. "You are a man of affairs. Do you still em-ploy Jewish lawyers? Is your physician a Jew?. Do you patron-ize a Jewish dentist?"

"Ach ya!" he replied rather dif-dently. "You see that does not fidently. concern my personal predilections. You must, of course, know that I have no choice. Es ist verboten to employ professional men."

I ventured to contradict him by saying "No, es ist nicht verboten but you are administered on pain of boycott not to do so. Is that not more correct?"

"Yes, yes," he retorted. "You see, if I employed a Jewish lawyer my business would suffer." and He

The only answer I got was that my German friend was very sorry but he had great faith in Hitler's ability to put Germany at the head of the nations and if that was the case he would be willing to the case he would be willing to subscribe to anything. Meanwhile, I repeat: Organize and complete the machine. Send your subscriptions to the properly constituted authorities. A million dollars subscribed make a more eloquent and effective and compelling impression than a thousand million verbal ex-postulations. Therefore, organize and let the world see that it does not pay any nation or any self-constituted group to assert au-thority and commit injustice without certain reprisal.

Childhood Glimpses

Ernst Toller was born and brought up in a little German town near the Polish horder. Germans Jews formed a more or united front against the Poles. The Poles were supposed to be dirty and have fleas. They were sup be the descendants of Although little Ernst had a Polish playmare, Stanislaus, the night watchman's son, he neverjoined with the German boys in yelling derisively at the Polish boys, "Polack! Polack!" He is playing engineer with a toy train, allowing Stanislaus to be the engineman and whenever Ernst whistles Stanislaus has to whistle. Whistles Statusiaus has to whistle. But Stanislaus, provoked by Brnst's queries, "Have you got fleas?" Are you dirty?" wrecks the toy. On the street later some the toy. On the street later some of the German boys yell at Ernst, "Yah to you, dirty Jew." He note that Stanislaus does not join in the abuse and the Jewish boy turns to the Pole for an explanation, "In Konitz the Jews killed a Christian baby and made Passion-cakes with its blood," "That's not true;" says "Well, is it true that we are dirty and have fleas?" Which is a prime example of a Jewish boy

Disturbed by the yowling of the other kids, Ernst asks his mother:
"Why are we Jews?" "Go to sleep, you naughty boy," she retosts, "and don" ask silly questions." Which is of course no swer, and to prove that he has no responsibility for the death of the Savior, he joins the "True Christians" sect, the preacher giving him a lump of sugar and the assurance that he's on the right terest ali-mas together and the preacher gives little Ernst a verse to recite. Savior Prefers Franz

"I am blissfully happy. I am not a Jew any more, and I have a Christmas verse to learn; nobody will ever be able to call "Dirty Jew!" after me again. I take up a trumpet and blow it when the preacher blows his trombone; and then in a clear, solemn voice I recite my Christian verse. But next day the preacher says he is very sorry, but the Savior would rather Franz recited the verse." It is always interesting, to say the least, if not fascinating, to learn the extent to which the child is father to the man, to discover, for example, in what way creative intelligence first manifests itself in shildhood. In Ernst Toller, the imagination of the boy first played about the elderly family cook, Julie, who liked Ernst well enough to break the rules for him and cook him omelettes. As a joke. one of Father's friends has invented a sweetheart for Julie, a tailor in the neighboring town, who knows nothing of the passion of which he is the object. Julie dwells on the tailor when everyone else has forgotten him, and Ernst feeds the silly flame by writing to Julie love letters supposed to have come from the tailor.

Pleasing the Cook

"Before long I am dissatisfied with this sweetheart for being an ordinary tailor, making suits for clerks and shopkeepers. I make him join the army and in a few weeks he is promoted to be Liu-tenant; soon he becomes Major and then General. Julie believes it all; Julie who is the terror of butchers who try to pass off bris-ket for sirloin; Julie who watches over her fowls with an eagle eye.

In due course the General is ennobled and finally he chooses a distant land, which I call Mariko, to rule over as King. An under-ground road reached by steps invisible to me and unknown to everybody else connects our house with the capital of Mariko. King is a very good man. He con-quers the heathen and baptizes them. But the wars never last very long; they last just as long as my appetite for Madeira cake. I go to Julie in the kitchen, and shut the door

"'A telegram, your Majesty!'"
"'Read it,'" says Julie, drying her hands in her apron.
"'Beloved Juliana,'" I read, "'I have slain the heathen in bloody conflict, and weary of the heat of battle I long for a cake from your Bake a good Madeira cake at once and give it to my minis-ter, Ernst, to send to me."

"Silently Julie goes to the store-

The Sky the Limit Little Ernst decides Julie must be knighted; he steals some paper cotillion favors from his sister and sews them on to a sofa cush ion, then winds a handkerchief around his father's walking stick for use as a sword, leads Julie to the Christmas tree has Julie kneel gives her a whacking accolade and when she has arisen, a Knight, presents her with orders from the Pope and the King. She scorns to sell one of her orders for a thousand marks. . . . And so a little story-telling boy who was to become a German poet and dramatist made joyous the life of a servant

CAPITAL & COMMENT

Capitol Hill is seriously considering favorable action on a resolution introduced by Representative Edward A. Kenney of New Jersey which would grant Dr. Albert Einstein American citizenship. In various congressional circles the proposal is being discussed and it looks as if the noted scientist, who now is literally a man without a country, will be adopted by the United States.

Should citizenship be granted to Dr. Einstein by congressional action, it would be an honor never before accorded by Congress to an alien. The lewish members of Congress are naturally pleased at the move taken by Representative Kenney. To the representative from New

Those who know the game, are minimizing Representative Samuel Dickstein's reports of threat-ning letters and telephone calls demanding that he call off the investigation of Nazi propaganda activi-ties in the United States. Dick-stein himself is, from all indica-tions, not losing much sleep over these threats. He is too much of an old-timer to take them too seri-ously. But that does not mean that he is keeping his eyes closed. The receipt of threatening letters by members of congress who have important legislative measurcs pending, or who are interested in certain types of investiga tions, is nothing new to Capitol Hill. Some members, however, have a good enough sense of news value to help these facts find their way into the newspapers.

The annual Easter egg-rolling event on the White House lawn almost proved to be a singular success this year if it were not for one thing. There was a shortage of Easter baskets!

And there is good reason for that, too. In previous years, most of the baskets carried by the children on Easter Monday came from Germany. This year, things were Germany. This year, things were different. The effective embargo on German-made goods by the Jewish people in this country, brought about a sharp falling off imports of German baskets. And so when the kids began to get ready for the Easter Monday event, there was a shortage of baskets. Most of the dealers in these baskets had stopped buying from Germany and American-made baskets had to be substi-

Representative Herman P. Koppleman, of Connecticut, has a resolution pending in the house Comon Interstate Commerce which is attracting national at-tention. The Connecticut representative is interested in finding out what there is in the milk distributing business of the country which makes prices high to the consumer and returns low to the farmer. His resolution would have the Federal Trade Commission investigate the business operations of the big milk distributors to de-termine if they employ monopolistic or other practices which are detrimental to the interests of the consumer or farmer.

From present indications, milk is becoming a national issue, es-pecially with the Agricultural Ad-justment Administration's efforts

CRITICAL MOMENTS

By GEORGE JOEL

The Home Stretch

It's down the home stretch now. In another month legitimate openings will be as rare as a pair of button shoes. Producers are digging for backing, playwrights are scratching over paper and directors are polishing scripts. They all want to get that opening night curtain up before the warm weather sets in and the first-line cri-tics go off to be impressed by forgn productions.

Last week was a me instance of this commendable desire to put actors to work. Besides such plays as "Moor Born", "Brain Sweat", "House of Remsen" and "One More Honeymoon", the Glibert & Sullivan series commenced, a variety show headed by George a variety show headed by Gforge Jessel and Walter O'Keefe was ushered in at what was once the Earl Carroll Theatre and "Four Saints In Three Acts" came back to town.

The next seven days will be just as active. Four new shows are on the schedule. "The Pirates of Penzance" at the Majestic on Monday night, "Furnished Rooms," a play by Ranhilde Bruland, "Wife Insurance" by Frederick Jackson and on Thursday Crane Wilbur's "Are You Decent?" will commence The author should be remembered from silent film days when his white-thatched crown was a familiar sight. New But Not Exciting

New But Not Exciting
Of last week's crop the one plece that may have a Cance is Don Totheroh's "Moor Born" which opened at the Playhouse. Although this is the fourth play in recent times which has dealt with the unfathomable Bronte sisters, it is by far the best, which may be faint praise, but it is so well acted and directed and so delicately written that it might get by. "One More that it might get by. "One More Honeymoon" will probably be gone by the time these lines reach you and it will pass on without regret. "The House of Remsen," dealing "The House of Remsen," dealing with an old theme in a new way is not entirely without merit but it does seem a little dated. "Brain Sweat", with an all Negro cast, is interesting and sometimes amusbut right now it is too early to make any prediction about its lasting quality. No fewer than five and possibly seven new films are due this week. Three of them, "This Man is Mine" Three of them, "This Man is Mine" with I rene Dunn which is at the Music Hall; "You're Telling Me," string W. C. Fields at the Paramounts, and a film version of Margaret Kennedy's "The Constant Nymph" at the Roxy with Victoria Hopper and Brian Aherne, are already before showed the string of the Paramounts.

Victoria Hopper and Brian Aherne, are already being shown. On Tuesday night at the Criterion "Viva Villa" will begin a special two-s-day run and on Wednesday "Looking For Trouble" with Jack Oakie and Spencer Tracy will open at the Rivoll. The two films about which no definite information can be given see. Vi two nims about which no centuce information can be given are "I Believed In You" which may open at the Mayfair on Tuesday and "As The Earth Turns" scheduled for Wednesday night at the Strand. This last named film has the endorsement of the Hays organization and this group of guar-dians of our morals has broadcast the word that the picture is an example of what Hollywood can do in the way of clean, wholesome fun. If the public does not take to it, if the public does not take to it, it will be embarrassing for the lads who, have been hollering about "clean" pictures.

The Yiddish stage is also getting ready to pack itself in mothballs for the season. The Yiddish Art Theatre has been playing pictures and now I learn that over in Brooklyn at the Rolland and Hopkinson Theatres the finale is to be performed, "The Dream Weaver a musical piece at the Rolland, will end the proceedings. This is a new venture and tells of the tribulations of a Yiddish radio crooner. At the Hopkinson Theatre Harry Kalmanowitch's "Fradel Seelss a Husband" has been resurrected under the title of "A Bit of Hap-piness" but it is still the same boloney.

Young Mark Hellinger, whose will appear in his introduction in column in the New York Mirror is read with great delight by those whose digestive tract is indestructible, was not so very many years ago just another one of the Jewish boys at Commerce High School. Preparing the Way for a War of Revenge

Treparing the way for a war or nevening are Treparing the way for a war or nevening are Tis terrifying to realize that such learned creatures as Ewald Banse are preparing the minds and the wills of German youth for a new war. When the Nazis came into power they appointed this cold-blooded pedant Professor of Military Science at Brunswick Technical College and his new work, issued in translation under the title of "Germany Prepares for War," terrifying enough as it is on its own account, is triply ominous for the official weight it undoubtedly carries. Ewald Banse is preparing the way for a war of revenge. The influence of this man would be sufficiently poisonous were he merely a rabble-rousing flannel-mouthed, froth-fleeded propagnadist, but his poison is more than normally deadly because he is intelligent, he is learned, he is informed. he is consistent and once you grant his nationalistic premise is informed, he is consistent and once you grant his nationalistic premise his conclusions are inevitable.

fronts which prevented her from winning the war and the ways in which evil Fate gave her defeat instead of the Victory she would surely have had had Ewald Banse been consulted as to the proper conduct of strategy. In fact, the Herr Professor has the strategy of the next war neatly laid out, including the campaign of propaganda, in which the Germans were woefully deficient in the last as compared with the English, the lining up of Allies and the uses of poison gases and the rest of it.

During the war the chief re-proach against the Germans was proach against the Germans was that they were fighting without mercy. The word Schrecklichkeit was the noun applied to the German method of warfare, and we thought of Admiral Von Tirpitz as a pretty low sort of skunk, because of his advocacy of the U-boat method of warfare. But Ewald with his professional incapacity to see human beings as human beings, but as animated ci-phers convenient for the creation of a new German Empire, this Banse makes Tirpitz sound like a puling infant. For he says, in so many words, that since Germany violated the neutrality of Belgium she might just as well have gone ahead and violated the neutrality of Holland, which would have given her an immediate outlet on the sea facing England. She could thus have negated the danger of the British economic blockade, and might even have threatened Great might even have threatened Great Britain with invasion. There are of course other ifs; if there had been more men on the Western front than there were; if Austria had done her part with greater vigor; if the U-boat campaign had the price of maintaining American neutrality; if the Allies hadn't bought off some of Germany's Al-lies; if the Brest-Litvosk peace had been better managed; if Ger-man propaganda had been more intelligently research intelligently pursued both at home and abroad, and if the Gods had been kinder. Even so Germany practically won the War and next time she fights, there isn't going to be any doubt about it. Not with Ewald Banse exercising his proper prerogative of advising the General Staff, the diplomatic corps, the propaganda bureaux and the rest of it. But one of the first requirements of Germany is either to get herself an Ally with an excellent oil supply, or else to lay in, in bomb-proof shelters, a vast reservoir of oil, or else hope for a German scientist to discover the lique-

Oriental Superstitions

One Oriental Jewess says that her Arab neighbor is responsible for the new beauty of her infant. She suggested that she rouge her baby, put mascara on its eyes, and rouge its lips in order to keep the evil spirits away. And the re-sult is magnificient. Why has the nurse not advised the same treatment for the rest of the population in swaddling clothes? Emphati-cally the nurse tells her why. And the artistically inclined mother is

"I'll take that stuff off my baby's face," she says, "and I'll tell my neighbor what you said."

That, however, is a somparatively innocuous manifestation of local ignorance. A disastrous instance occurred last summer, when a number of families came from Kurdistan to celebrate the Mosler festival of the Prophet Elijah. The shrine for this is a dark cave in Mt. Carmel—one whose lack of ventilation causes even adults to faint. It is a source of scourge, dysentery, measles and other diseases. To this veritable cesspool mothers come every August, bringing with them their sick infants for a miraculous "cure." Despite the warnings of the Hadassah nurses, the Kurdish women insisted upon their ancient practice. And as a result of the pilgrimage, many of the children fell ill, and three of them died.

Drive Out the Evil One Other superstitious practices, such as pinning dog's teeth and

A little blue and white house, | birds' beaks to the clothing of fants to safeguard them against the evil eye, sometimes fail And then, the Orientals have another remedy. When the child becomes ill, they apply a hot iron to the affected part to exceriate the Evil One. They wear amulets on throat and arms, and rub garlic on their necks to guard against smallpox. And there are midwives who advise their patients to drink water from delay in labor. Against all that, in addition to he diseases to which the more knowing portion of the population is helr, Hadassah has fought. And the success of the enterprise is revealed by statistics. In 1924, 115 Jewish children under the age of one died out of every 1,000 live births. By 1932, the number of deaths was reduced to eighty-five out of every 1,000. Tel Aviv, the Jewish city, has the lowest infant mortality in the country, with sixty-eight per 1,000.

Few Mortalities

In the case of mortalities of mothers in childbirth, the Palestinian record far outdoes that of progressive, rich New York. Recent reports of the American Academy of Medicine made the comparison possible.

In 247 cities throughout the United States campaigns have been organized to raise funds to-$3,000,000 quota of the United Jewish Appeal, according to an announcement from the New York headquarters of the fundraising organization, which repre-sents the Joint Distribution Committee and the American Palestine Campaign in a united effort for the relief and rehabilitation of Jews in Germany and other lands and for the settlement of refugees in Palestine.

The series of campaigns, said to be the most extensive that have been conducted by American Jews since the close of the World War, have been organized in response to the appeals of the national lea-ders of the joint fund-raising ders of the joint fund-raising agency who have stressed the urg-ency of making available as quick-ly as possible a maximum sum to meet the tragic plight of the Jews in Germany. Rabbi Jonah B. Wise, co-chairman of the United Jewish Appeal in a statement on the necessity nation-wide support for the United Jewish Appeal, declared that Jews are called upon to contribute funds for German Jewish relief not mere ly to cope with physical needs but to combat "those forces which are not dangerous only to the life of our people, but, what is more im-portant, to their honor." While the Brooklyn admirers of Burman charges Walter with deseman charges Walter with dese-crating the American flag by in-serting the Nazi swastika on an American shield. Magistrate Francis Irwin in Jefferson Market Court issued the summons.

An effort will be made by Burman, he said on Friday, to amend the summons to include Joseph Schuster, the reputed leader of the Brooklyn division of the Friends who are said to have hadquarters at 533 Knickerbocker avenue. With a number of units in the

Burman also charged that the wearing of Brown Shirts at public functions in this country violates Section 246, Division 22, Foreign in response to a question Friday told a Jewish Daily Bulletin re-porter that if he tried to stop tonight's meeting, the 400,000 Germans in the Ridgewood area would retaliate against the 15,000 Jews. 'We can't fight Hitler by pre-

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency) BERLIN, April 6. — German "Aryans" married to Jews have been given fresh incentive to divorce their Jewish mates by the latest regulations adopted by the Nazi party stipulating that per-sons married to Jews will not be allowed to join the party "if the marriage continues."

The new regulations, which were drawn up by Herr Buch, also bans all applicants for membership who cannot prove pure "Aryan" descent.

Though the new Consti-Jews tution that is being drafted is reported as guaranteeing liberty of conscience and religious free dom, it is believed that the situation of Austrian Jewry will be aggravated because of the pro-jected scheme of establishing various categories of citizenship rights. The Christian feelings of the

While there are the most spec tacular charges justified by evi-dence thus far come across by the writer, other information gleaned over one year's investigation of Nazi activities both here and abroad clearly indicates that the Nazi menace to the American govern ernment is real and palpable

Under the direction and inspiration of the League of Friends of New Germany approximately twen ty political groups all of a more or less Fascist creed, are striving for numbers and unity. If such unity is ever brought about, and at the present the process is going ahead rapidly, a formidable F group modeled after Hitler's policies will be the resuit.

Already the threat of anti-Semitism has become real in a boycott of American Jewry under the direction of men exported by the Hitler government.

The press has been tricked into giving the Fascist movement considerable publicity which is resulting in appreciable unity and expansion of the Fascists. Nationaldrums are being sounded throughout the country, and daily more Americans are being lured more Americans are being lured into the fold of intolerance and into the fold of intolerance and surrender of their personal liber-ties, and while militancy develops amazingly within the Fascist ranks, attempts are being made to proselytize American forces organizations without,
