Harpers to Circulate Liepmann's Book on Reich Despite Libel Suit

Delmer, London Express Writer, Sues Publishers Here and in London

"Murder—Made in Germany," by Heinz Liepmann, will not be withdrawn from circulation, despite the libel suit brought by Dr. Sefton Delmer, London Express correspondent, it was announced yesterday by Cass Canfield, president of Harper and Bros., publishers.

Delmer, who was in Berlin at the time of the Reichstag fire a year ago last February, is suing the New York firm for $250,000 and the London firm of Hamish Hamilton for the same amount.

The complaint against Harper's was filed in the Supreme Court of New York County by the English writer's local attorneys, Jackson, Fox, Nash and Erophy, 15 Broad street. It is alleged that Delmer was libelled in Liepmann's book. The offending passage, quoted as follows, is printed in Liepmann's records clandestinely circulated in Berlin as part of the anti-Nazi propaganda, appears on the bottom of Page 2, under the heading of the following page and reads:

"(H) Hitler's constant companion and friend, the English journalist Delmer, telegraphed to his paper several minutes before the fire was discovered, all about the fire and who had done it."

The author has served a month

HEINZ LIEPMANN

In a Dutch prison for another statement in the same work, to the effect that Hindenburg named Hitler Chancellor in a deal to kill the investigation into relief funds given Hindenburg's Eastern Prussian estate from the Osthilfe, or Eastern Relief.

Liepmann was arrested and jailed on the ground of having libelled the head of a friendly government, but German efforts to extradite him were foiled.

Larkin, Andrews and McNaughton, 32 Liberty street, represent Harper's and have until some time in May to file their answer to the complaint.

For a time she worked for the Carnegie Nutrition Laboratory. During the war World War Miss Kallen served on the staff of the War Industries Board in Washington. Subsequently she worked in Boston, in New York as secretary to Dr. J. J. Jewish Youth Day to Be Held 90 Units Aid Drive of Fed. Here on May 6 For $500,000

Union of Amer. Hebrew Congregations Sponsor Nationwide Fete

For the purpose of fostering loyalty to the ideals of the synagogue, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations is sponsoring the observance of Jewish Youth Day on the first Sunday in May of each year. This year, Jewish Youth Day will be observed on May 6 by over 100 Youth groups throughout the country.

The Union of American Hebrew Congregations for many years has been vitally interested in advancing the cause of Reform Judaism among the young people. Two years ago, the cooperation of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods enabled the Union to do intensive work in youth education. A department was established for this purpose and has since, under the directorship of Dr. Harry L. Connin, been engaged in stimulating youth service, cultural activities and projects in contemporary Jewish life.

Speaking of Jewish Youth Day, Dr. Connin said:

"We have launched Jewish Youth Day in accordance with our aim of interpreting Judaism in the light of modern life. It is a symbol that the synagogue is youthful and vital in its outlook on Jewish problems. It recognizes the worth of the activities in which young people engage."

Judge Nova Announces New Boies—'Restaurant Day' Changed

Formation of new divisions and reorganization of other groups in the Trade and Membership Council, fund-raising force of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, are proceeding steadily and the total number now exceeds ninety actively at work in the Federation's $500,000 twenty-fifth anniversary campaign, it was announced last night by County Judge Algoner L. Nova.

The announcement by Judge Nova gave names of the officers of the trades and professions groups newly formed or in which there has been a reorganization not previously made known and which are especially active in soliciting funds on behalf of the twenty-five affiliated societies which will benefit the campaign.

Samuel Salzman, chairman of the Council, expressed his satisfaction at the achievements thus far on the part of Council workers.

Supreme Court Justice Mitchell May, president of the Federation, declared that "it is extremely doubtful if the Federation could have continued to function without the invaluable aid given by the Trade and Membership Council."

Among divisions of the Council recently formed or reorganized are the Dairy Products division, Robert Gabriel, honorary chairman, and Louis Dilbert, chairman; the Paper and Paper Box group, Harry Friedman, chairman, and Harry Etkin, chairman; the Dental Division, Dr. Mendel Nevlin, chairman, and Dr. Matthew D. Levin, co-chairman.

Fascism Beefs Unrest Throughout U. S.

Intellectuals Caught in Its Web—A Panacea for All Ills, Is Cried

Fascists Who Seek to De throne Democracy

Huey Long's 'Every Man A King' Policy Proves Attractive—Hatred Penetrates Coal Miners' Union—Evidence Points to Capitalist Aid

Nazi activities in this country have been brought to a head by the first open attack on the Jews of America by the Friends of New Germany, Hitler organization in the United States, which has proclaimed a boycott on the Jews. The following is the fifth of a series of articles detailing the rise and growth of the Nazi-inspired anti-Semitic movement in this country in all its ramifications. The articles are based on an extensive investigation of Nazi propaganda activities in this country and in Germany for a period of over a year.

Throughout the length and breadth of the United States today one may find Fascist groups or groups of individuals who closely resemble Fascism that only the practiced eye can see the difference. It is unlikely that when and if America's strong Fascist party rises it will call itself Fascist. With few exceptions American Fascists veer from the appellation. At this moment it is easiest to identify Fascists by Economic Liberty (White Shirts), the Ku Klux Klan, the Silver Shirts and the Order of '76. The Silver Shirts and Order of '76 deny being Fascist, but a survey of their demands and undeciphered, but pressed policies proves convincingly that they are precisely Fascist.

The National Watchmen, a Fascist group of the Middle West under E. F. M. Cox, national commander, bases its reason for existence mainly upon the necessity for levying high taxes on the larger income groups. It professes to advocate an over $10,000 yearly wage to be taxed up to 100 per cent. This group would also nationalize all property except personal and real estate. It professes to advocate a substantial minimum wage to employees and fixed prices. Poverty would have no place in a country governed by the National Watchmen.

"Intellectuals" Advocating Fascism
Fascism is being propagated by a number of intellectuals who admit no following other than the moral support of their readers. Louis Brandeis, former justice of the United States consular service in Central America and Harold Lord Varney, who with Dennis publishes "The Awakener" fall in this category. Dennis' "Fascism is anti-Semitic only to the extent that it dictates a strong sense of American nationalism to Jewry."

Seward Collins, editor of the "Jewish Review" (formerly The Bookman), likewise professes to be among this type of Fascist intellectual, but he would be more severe in his treatment of Jews, and that classes of Jewry would have to embrace second-class citizenship in a Fascist America of his conception.

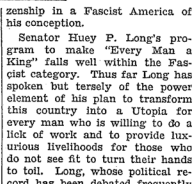

Senator Huey P. Long's program to make "Every Man A King" falls well within the Fascist category. The Senator has spoken but tersely of the power element of his plan to transform this country into a Utopia for every man who is willing to do a lick of work and to provide luxurious livelihoods for those who do not see fit to turn their hands to toil. Long, whose political record has been debated frequently before the upper house in Washington and whose policies are viewed with considerable scorn and suspicion by the general press claims to have enrolled 316,000 persons in his drive for limitation of wealth.

In the April 5 issue of "The American People," a weekly paper turned out by Long to set favorable aspects of his case before the people, the Senator from Louisiana wrote that 10,000 members of the day after tomorrow "share our wealth" movement. Undoubtedly Long, a convincing spokesman, has received considerable support. He appeals to the religious with freedom of conscience from the Bible. He appeals to the poor with promises of fortunes; to the jobless with promises of work; to the common folk with provincialisms such as "daggon" and meticulously chosen words in grammar; to the patriotic with references to the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution; to the wealthy with promises of ten to fifty million dollars of their fortunes and a million dollars a year income; to disgruntled political elements with attacks on the present administration; to the city-bound clerks with promises of long vacations in the open; to the lazy with promises of an amazingly short working day and working week, and to all with promises of all the luxuries one may buy with $10,000 a year.

Long Bemoans Lack of Power
Long's references to the type of "Every Man A King" government have been subtle and infrequent. In a debate in New York a few months ago he exclaimed in answer to a query put by one of the opponents, "Just give me the power, brother, and I'll show you how to put this plan into effect." Another time, during a nation-wide gathering of the German from Louisiana said that this would necessitate the centralization of power. He expanded no further on this all-important phase of the program, but revealed the plan.

Long's organization has perhaps its greatest following in the Senator's home State. His policies are broadcast from the pulpits and soapboxes of members of the vast and powerful Long political machine.

In many regions Socialists and even Communists have tried to win certain of the Fascist policies of local organizers. This is particularly true of districts in which a great percentage of the population is of German descent. The Progressive Miner, organ of radical groups of miners enrolled in the Progressive Miners of America, has suddenly turned anti-Semitic. During recent issues of the paper a strong vein of anti-Semitism has run through its editorial columns. It is understood that a number of the editors and near Gillespie, Illinois, where the paper is published, are affiliated with the League of Friends of New Germany, the Germanic Alliance and other pro-Hitlerite German organizations.

Nazis Influence Miners' Group
The Progressive Miners of America have veered sharply from the left mainly because of the influence of its German members.

There is one of the most bitter anti-Roosevelt newspapers in the country and seldom does the Administration or the President do anything which meets with the approval of the Progressive Miners. The language of the newspaper is typical of its form, is presented herewith. It is an excerpt from an editorial backing up Wirt's "Kerenky" charges: "The only way America will ever recover from the yellow fever imposed on them by INTERNATIONAL GANGSTERS and their tools in strategic positions in America is by forcing a thorough investigation of the reasons why American workers in industry and agriculture are kept idle to aid foreign industry and agriculture to invade American markets at home as well as abroad."

The sentiment strangely resembled that of William Dudley Pelley, who circulated confidential letters among select subscribers to his Silver Shirt intelligence service at about the same time as the above was printed. The same condition of brewing revolution against Democracy persists throughout the entire Middle West labor-troubled areas. The tremendous German element throughout the section has been "gleichgeschaltet" mainly through the branch offices of the Germanic Alliance and its American-American for the Fascist movement in America and for the support of the Hitler regime in Germany. The tie-up between the Germanic Alliance and its American Fascist cooperative, the Crusaders for Economic Liberty, has been explained in preceding articles.

Capitalism and Fascism
Observers state that a former editor of the "Jewish Review" has veered sharply to the right, and now under the guidance of aspiring American dictators revolutionary activities are proceeding under the militant banner of well-organized Fascist groups. It is known that the Order of '76, under the direction of Royal Scott Golden in New York, has secured considerable support throughout the Middle West.

A peculiar feature of Fascism, particularly that of Adolf Hitler is evidenced in columns here. While Fascist policies aim at the destruction of capitalism, the movement is frequently brought out by capitalist interests. Judging from current developments among the Fascists and anti-Semites operating throughout the Middle West,

It used to be 9 West Fifty-seventh street, home of sables, ermine and rare brocades. Debutantes, mannequins and bejeweled ladies were the order of the day. But times do change. Tappe, Inc., has departed, and the Thrift House has moved in.

There was a gala affair the other night, marking the first birthday celebration of Federation's "youngest child," established when the Women's Division of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies was confronted a little more than a year ago with the perennial problem of raising money. There is nothing extraordinary in a rummage sale, and authorities permitted the ladies have their fun. But the group under leadership of Mrs. Julius Ochs Auer, had other plans. None of you conceding salesday-for-a-day for them. Their project was a shop in the fashionable fifties for all to visit and patronize daily. Stock was to be composed of members' contributions of clothing, furniture and bric-a-brac, and the staff to be made up of members themselves. Authorities smiled, and let the idea pass.

Subsequently Herman Patrick Tappe closed his shop and 9 West Fifty-seventh street was to let. Adolph Lewinsohn, who owned the building, donated it to the cause. The rent was simple. When the enterprising ladies sorted out shoes and ships and sealing wax, and asked for new bundles at the end of the first week of business, authorities were slightly startled but muttered beginners' luck.

The women knew feminine psychology. As long as they continued to pique the curiosity of the passerby success was certain. And the record was simple. that they did with a grotesque window display. Other shops along the thoroughfare reflect the seasons—winter brings woollens to their stalls, and summer chiffons. But in the case of Thrift House there is the charm of the unknown, the hazard of the unpredictable, and all year is its season. The wide assortment in the window defends the axiom that people like variety. Dante's Beatrice with most of her nose cut off reposes in the foreground and winks at those who pass from beneath the brim of a fedora. A saddle and a Spanish shawl are in a sort of fell'vish spash nearby. Inside, the volunteer clerk of the day will tell you that she spent a trying hour untangling that shoe string when it arrived in the morning. But untangled it had to be, for nothing goes to waste at Thrift House. Bikes how could it have earned $25,000 for Federation during its first year of existence?

The Jewish Student in the Campus

Loose Talk Said to Be Cause Of Latest Racial Antagonism

But Liberalism Has Crept Into Modern Undergraduate's Ideas

As a representative of the Jewish faith, Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron of Baltimore last year traveled from coast to coast on a good will tour with a Catholic and a Protestant representative. He was named as a saint winner with the latter two of the Gethseil Medal, awarded annually to the American who did most for Jewry during the preceding year.

At the request of Herbert E. Steiner, National President of the Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity, I was sent last year to "observe" the customs of the country some observations and impressions of the American campus. Nothing I saw will be extraordinary or new. I hope only to stimulate some earnest thinking on the knotty problem of Jewish-Christian relations at our colleges and universities.

Mr. Steiner was present at a meeting in New York at the Hotel Pennsylvania in January, at which Father Ross, Rev. and I made a report on a coast-to-coast tour from which we had just returned. The tour was sponsored by the National Council of American Christians and was intended to promote a better understanding between the groups.

It might be of interest to college students to know that among the universities that we visited were the following: Ohio State, Ohio Wesleyan, Indiana University, Wisconsin, Wake, Kansas, Colorado, California, Texas, and Southern Methodist.

One of the most gratifying experiences of the tour was the very evident interest in university men in this subject. At Ohio State, for instance, an afternoon session was held at the leadership of the head of the Department of Sociology, at which attendance was voluntary and which was scheduled to last for four and a half hours. Approximately four hundred students and extended so late into the afternoon that the janitor had to close the doors. We were told that if we could spend a week on the campus, classes would be opened for us and discussion opportunities arranged.

The technique employed in all of these meetings was that of frank discussion. Bringing latent prejudices into the open was the specific value. When one talk started, there was no difficulty in keeping it going. At first there were usually some abashment and embarrassment, but frequently convinced by the very necessity to express them openly that their prejudices were no so deep as they had imagined. This was evident time and time again.

Students Are Liberals
A word as to the nature of the prejudices. We found very little religious prejudice as such. The liberal movement among college men and women has gone so far that religious convictions are accepted as intimate and personal. Both Jews and Christians have moved so far to the left ideologically that it is quite rare to find anyone particularly interested in

Observes Youth

Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron

whether a man worships in Hebrew, Latin, or English, or whether he says the Kaddish in the language of Isaiah, in the language of the Missa Solemnis, or in English. But we did find everywhere certain fixed attitudes, absorbed in the Sunday School, in the home, or by the social group with which one might be identified. For instance, we found everywhere a definite suspicion as to Catholic political ambition, a resentment against the dogmatism of the Catholic position with its implications of political power. So far as we were concerned, we found the belief, more or less general, that Jews dominate the United States financially, that the Jew is interested only in money. We found also in many places the belief that all Jews are radicals. And often these mutually contradictory opinions were held by the same person! These prejudices and misapprehensions, of course, go very deep. It is necessary, so far as possible, to mitigate them by setting forth the facts. And this we tried to do everywhere.

However, it would be more interesting to our Jewish college men and women to know some of the widespread indictments against them which rise out of the daily relationships on the campus. Perhaps if examples of the fault of the Jewish student could be somewhat mitigated, other suspicions might likewise be removed.

Let me say first of all, I do not take the position that Jews are always and invariably in the right. I do not feel that we must plead guilty to all of the counts in the Gentile indictment. But it does us no good to assert that the Gentiles are all wrong and that if any move is to be made it must be made by the Christian student. I believe that if some of these things are longer way to go in rooting out prejudices than the Jewish student, but at the same time I believe that some of these things that Jewish college students can do and must do in order to put themselves in a more defensible position. Other words, while we resist Christian prejudice against us we must sweep before our own doors and begin the job at home.

Fraternity Life

I do not want to deal in generalities, though it would be simpler and easier. I would rather come to grips with the situation and perhaps suggest some practical steps that might be taken by our Jewish college students which might be helpful in promoting better relationships between them and their Christian fellow-students.

One aspect of the problem we met everywhere. It concerns the attitude of Jewish fraternity men. It will not be easy to speak of this without hurting some feelings; and, let I shall try to discuss the matter as objectively as possible. We found that the Jewish fraternity man tends to become a type. He runs with a certain crowd. He identifies himself with the crowd. He usually divides Jews into the "we" group and the "they" group. "We" are all those who belong to fraternities. "They" are those who do not belong to fraternities, and there is a wall between the two groups. Let us be frank. The average Jewish fraternity group is frequently inclined to sopernal its Jewishness. If there are any Jewish students who belong to the liberal group in the university let the radical group, the average Jewish fraternity student is apt to be apologetic for these Jewish students. I have heard again and again the statement, "I am not of that kind of Jew as we," or "They are the cause of all our trouble." There is an effort to isolate the Christian student.

Now I am not arguing as to the worthwhileness of the Jewish fraternities. That is another problem. But I would like to point out here certain faults in the attitude of Jewish fraternity students. I wonder if these Jewish students realize that they are starving their Jewish feelings. They are not accepting Jewish fraternity students drift from their Jewish moorings while they are never completely accepted by the Gentiles. They are accepted by the Christian students. They move in a sort of border-land; inferno like lost souls. This applies just as much to those who have thrown overboard all Jewish affiliation, who are aggressively vocal in his leadership of radical movements, and holds his Jewish identity as a thing to be ashamed of.

It is vain, I have observed, to believe that you will gain the respect of the non-Jewish student by drawing lines between Jews. The prejudiced mind makes no distinction between Jew and Jew. But there is a real danger for the Jewish student. It is an emotional thing. Cutting one's self loose from one's fellow-Jews does something to your very soul. By some subtle working of the emotional life, feelings of difference move over into feelings of superiority. They, in turn, are likely to develop into sentiments of regret and, finally, of shame, and you have the beginning of a distorted view of the whole personality and a substantial emotional basis for a devastating inferiority complex. The Jewish student begins by feeling himself different from his fellow Jewish students. The harder he tries to distinguish himself from his brothers or Jews, the more he seeks to make himself in Christian worlds the more superior he feels to his fellow Jews. Then the law of psychic compensation comes in and the Jew is ashamed. He has reasoned his being at its very source.

The "Jew-nion"

It might be interesting to tell the story of the Jew-nion on the campus of one of the large mid-western universities. Although the details in this particular university are perhaps different, nevertheless the general situation is not unduly duplicated almost anywhere. In University, there is a student's Union. Last fall, among the floats in a parade was a replica of the Union but it was spelt "Jew-nion." This was merely an unpleasant expression of an undercurrent of feeling which has been growing over a number of years. The implication was that the Union was a Jewish hangout. The student officers of the Union, both Jewish and Christian, were unhappy about this campus situation but seemed perplexed as to how to meet it. Indeed, both Jews and Christians were beginning to accept the accusations that the Union was a Jewish hangout and to blame the Jewish students!

Desiring to get at the bottom of the matter, I suggested that we hold a small meeting to discuss the problem. At the meeting were the Christian student-president of the Union, as well as a number of Jewish most Christian students on the executive body of the Union, the two Christian executives of the Union, several members of the faculty (Christian), and the head of the Jewish Foundation. This "bull session" lasted long after midnight. A number of interesting points were brought out. In the first place, the head of the Jewish Foundation had never met the head of the Union, nor had he ever met the student-president of the Union. Again, a check on attendance did not seem to indicate that the building was used more by Jewish students than by Christian students. Furthermore, frank talk revealed that the prejudice was not based upon "left" opinions held by Jewish students but rather on their complexion or peculiarities in dress and conduct.

It was quite obvious at the end of this lengthy discussion that at least Jewish prejudice was really at the bottom of the whole matter; but another factor of great importance of which the Christians were unconscious until the discussion was revealed it was the feeling of disappointment on the part of executives of the Union that large groups of fraternity and sorority members did not use the building. It was pointed out that this was true also of Jewish fraternities; they ignored the Union just as the Christian fraternities; and the executives of the Union, in their desire to make the Union program appeal to the entire student body, admitted a certain unhappiness at their failure to enlist the interest of these groups.

The root of the matter was the disincarnation of the fraternity groups to mingle with the non-fraternity group; but the situation had taken an anti-

Jewish form. All groups in the matter admitted this to be the fact. It was conceded that most of the trouble was loose talk, founded upon a latent anti-Semitism. It was determined by all concerned quietly to attempt to dissipate the accepted and groundless gossip that the Union is a Jewish hangout. It was determined by all upward toward the Jewish student but because it lessened the effectiveness of the Union's work on the campus.

This is an indication of how campus problems grow up, where they have their root. It also suggests how frank discussion on the part of open-minded Jews and Christians can very often reveal the true facts in the situation and suggest a way out.

Horner's Achievements Are Listed by Hodes

(Special to the J.D.B.)
CHICAGO, April 23.—Feeling that little is known of Governor Henry Horner's accomplishments since he took office a little more than a year ago, Chairman Barnett L. Hodes of the Illinois Tax Commission has just made public a list of the governor's deeds.

Improvements in the finance and tax systems of the state are mentioned by Hodes as well as a variety of other reforms and measures, his list of Horner's achievements consisting of twenty-five different items.

A unique distinction came to him when in 1924 his congregation voted to retain him as rabbi for life. As executive secretary of the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital he has rendered help to many a mountaineer suffering bad luck. To meet the needs of the hospital's expanding sphere of influence, a burden that no one else cared to shoulder, Rabbi Rhine refused calls to serve where facilities for biblical research might have given outlet to his intellectual leanings.

The Human Touch East Side, West Side

By HARRY SALPETER

By
HERB KRUCKMAN

Out of Jail
The Dutch government, by yielding to German importunities and arresting and jailing Heims Liepmann, author of "Murder — Made in Germany" for the offense of having believed the head of a friendly government, meaning von Hindenburg, merely prolonged the period necessary for Liepmann to recuperate from the wounds and the injuries suffered by him in the Nazi concentration camp from which he had escaped. Liepmann is now out of jail. The wounds are not healed, but while he is in jail he had the great comfort and the solace of knowing that friends all over the world were fighting for him and watching with deep concern the uneven battle between the Nazis and Liepmann. He did not have such aid and comfort there is little doubt that the Germans would have got hold of him, through the process of extradition, if they failed to do to him when they had him in concentration camp they would undoubtedly have done at their second opportunity.

I learn that during the month he was confined he was that jail's most important prisoners, receiving, during the period, some 150,000 thousand letters, telegrams and cables, from individuals and organizations in every corner—well, in almost every corner—of the world.

And among those who wrote to him—and this letter was not solicited by the enterprising press agent of the publisher, "Murder—Made in Germany"—was one from Professor Albert Einstein, who appears to have believed, and read, the book well at Princeton. Professor Einstein's letter reads:

"I have read your book 'Murder—Made in Germany' with the greatest interest, and feel that it is the most significant work on Hitler-Germany that has come to my attention. The clarity of the facts in the form of a story makes the vividness of impression which a stringing together of unrelated facts can never attain. I wish you not only but the whole really civilized world the widest possible distribution of the book."

They Can't Take It

Hitler and his aides can give smashing and merciless blows to their enemies, blows that may kill, but they can't take—caricatures. Their inability to do so is comparatively mild a form of punishment does not necessarily prove the Nazi leaders bad sports as it proves them defenseless and afraid. You'd be surprised. It's a really big man who can stand up under a good caricature and not wince or use the threat of diplomacy or the open force of the police to suppress the draughtsman's revelation. When you're a force to be reckoned with, you get through with a man or woman who has told more about that man or woman than is good for comfort.

There are good European caricaturists and apprentices to them, got under the hides of Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, et al, for the other day the authorities at Prague tried to remove caricatures of these gentry, the way the Nazis artists, many of them, if not all, refugees from the Fatherland, the German Embassy at Prague made representations to the Czechoslovakian Foreign Office. But the sketches removed from the exhibition walls, but not until after the cartoonists and the Prague public had been aroused by the publicity and had been given enough days in which to appease it.

And at the Metropolitan Museum, here in New York, a caricature of Hitler had to be removed, not because Nazis complained—although they may very well have done so—but because, according to the Museum's published explanation, that institution does not make a practice of exhibiting caricatures of living people. Companion caricatures also came down, including one of Dawes. But because these caricatures were removed they were published in the newspapers and more men and women saw what had given offense than would have had the caricatures remained on exhibition and been seen only by those comparatively few who visit the Metropolitan. After all, The New York Times has a far greater circulation, daily, than the Museum here has weekly.

Our Own Carl Rose

I do not know how able were the caricaturists whose work was exhibited at Prague, and I do believe that the removal of the Hitler caricature at the Metropolitan was any great loss. So long as Carl Rose continues to draw Hitler, Goering and Goebbels, as he has for the past year in the pages of the Jewish Daily Bulletin, he will still other caricaturists have a mark to shoot at.

Carl Rose can do things to Adolf Hitler, without altering his fundamental physiognomy, which should make him a difficult squirm. It is in no spirit of parochial pride or village chauvinism I say that when better caricatures of Hitler and Goering, Carl Rose will draw them. The pity of it is that he does not draw more of them, for he writes the most pungent editorials, sometimes, in a few elegant combinations of line. The cartoons of Carl Rose which have appeared in The Bulletin since the time of the Prague exhibition, all to themselves, in one of the exhibition rooms of New York. And the first man to greet this suggestion with a curt and rude raspberry will be—Carl Rose, who, in common with another well known cartoonist, Rollin Kirby to be exact, the notion that he is just a good and capable carpenter, not an artist.

To return for a paragraph to the subject of censorship attracting undue attention to the subject, I am sore. In the same week in which the Prague caricatures had to be removed and the Metropolitan took down a couple of caricatures, Admiral Rodman made a hue and cry about a painting by a fellow artist entitled "The Fleet in," which depicts a fleet of ships in a drive in any but the most amiable attitudes. The moment Admiral Rodman and Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Clegg, got about it, the papers took up it, reproducing the painting in, literally, millions of copies so that Kirby to be exact, the notion that it does not have, in reputation, like a very good picture, but it does look, if not posterior at that position. Lady Cynthia will help induce some one to join the Navy and have a hint of a town, at least when "The Fleet's in."

To Address Youth Rally

Dr. Shalom Spiegel, Professor of Hebrew Literature at the Jewish Institute of Religion, and Joseph Sprinkza, vice president of the World Zionist Actions Committee, and Histruthi embassy in America, will be the principal speakers at a youth rally next Saturday evening at Stuyvesant High School. The rally is sponsored by the Jewish Council for Labor Palestine.

"Twins or no twins, lady. I charge a penny a piece."

The Bulletin's Day Book

Sir Oswald Mosley is back in the headlines again. The ex-socialist M. P., who started a Black Shirt organization in Great Britain eighteen months ago, modeled, he declared, after Mussolini's, delighted an audience of ten thousand at Albert Hall Sunday night with a long speech in which he warned "international finance" to keep its hands off England and advised the Jews to abjure Communism and "put the interests of England before the interests of Jewry."

Sir Oswald spoke for an hour and a half "without any notes and without any pauses except for applause," the Times reported. Unless we are mistaken, a Fascist leader must be able to speak under the same conditions for at least two hours to win the epaulettes of a full-regimental shirt leader.

Arnold Leese, leader of the Imperial Fascists, who spends as much time hating the Mosleys as they do the Jews (that is, about half of each day for each), frequently orates for more than two hours at a time.

Mosley, wealthy in his own right and son of a titled family, with the traditional schooling at Winchester and Sandhurst, came into the public eye when, with his wife, the late Lady Cynthia Curzon Mosley, he turned Socialist. A disagreement on policy brought his withdrawal from the Labor Party in 1931 and he swung to the Right with the creation of Britain's first Fascist party.

Although his party did not start out as anti-Semitic, it may well be said that it was forced into that position. Lady Cynthia will be the granddaughter of the late Levi Leiter of Chicago. Their children, therefore, under the "Aryan clause" would be "non-Aryan."

"Mosley is a tool of the Jewish" rival Fascist leaders cried. Every corner of Mosley's against anti-

Semite practices was seized by them as proof of this contention. Mosley's outfit, which numbered such illustrious members as Kild Lewis, hero of the British prize fight, began to give ground before the membership drives of the half a dozen other shirt groups.

Now the Mosleys exclude Jews "because, as a class they are hostile to us" and, with the aid of the endorsement of Lord Rothermere's papers, the membership of the organization is beginning to swell.

Sir Oswald is tall and lean, with a sharp, aquiline face, black hair, snapping black eyes, and a bristling pointed moustache set against his "awake. He is most frequently to be seen in the black pull-over jersey which is the distinguishing feature of the uniform of his group. References to him as a wealthy playboy in politics or uniform irritate him.

Critical Moments

By GEORGE JOEL

Rice to London

When Rice Jewish, spectated, Pulitzer Prize winner and one of the very few successful playwrights who has a sense of social consciousness and who periodically forsakes the commercially profitable Broadway stage to do a play protesting against the system that has made him wealthy, left America last week to spend a vacation abroad. He called for England where his "Counsellor-at-Law," which ran so long in this country, is being produced by Sir Harry Jackson. It has been playing at the Piccadilly and now reaches New York that London audiences, although amused at the spectacle, cannot quite understand this type of American-Jewish lawyer.

When Mr. Rice returns to these shores he will begin casting three of his own plays, "Judgment Day," a melodrama of Europe, "Between Two Worlds," in which all the action takes place on an ocean liner, and "Not For Children," a satiric comedy.

New Harmon and Ulman Play in Rehearsal

Sidney Harmon and James R. Ulman, who produced "Men in White," this season have a new play rehearsing which, as their writing is called "The Milky Way." It is a comedy by Harry Clark and Lynn Root and is described by Arnold Einstein as being "a presentation of the show as a 'piercing lyric of life among the sadists.' It will open at the Cort Theatre on May 7. The cast includes Hugh O'Connell, Leo Donnelly, Brian Donlevy, Gladys George, Emily Lowry and William Foran.

Warning

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer very virtuously remind that a warning be given to the public that the picture "Viva Villa," the picture now at the Criterion, has nothing in common with a picture entitled "La Villa" which is being shown at the hope nobody goes to the latter in hopes of seeing the former. Don't say we didn't tell you.

Greek Nazis Broke; Suspended Their Paper

EEE Organ, 'Drassis,' Gives Reason to 'Assemble Forces'

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
 SALONICA, April 23.—(Drassis), organ of the Greek anti-Semites, has suspended publication for one month. The last issue of the paper stated that the purpose of the paper was to "assemble our forces in order to return to the battle." Actually the shutting down of the anti-Semitic paper is said to be due to the lack of funds.
 The EEE was founded about a year ago by Greek anti-Semites who announced their wholehearted acceptance of the Hitler program toward the Jews. Some time ago the group held a convention in Salonica, which has a population of more than 60,000. They announced their movement was growing rapidly and gaining thousands of adherents.
 In the recent elections in Salonica they nominated for Mayor an Hitlerite shoemaker who was suspected of having been involved in the riots against the Jews in 1931, which led to the incendiary destruction of the entire Jewish quarter. The EEE candidate, however, received only a few hundred votes.

Smyrna Jews Plan Prayers in Turkish

Intense Nationalism Affects Community—Quarrel Over Languages
 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
 SMYRNA, April 23.—Smyrna Jews decided today that prayers in the synagogues are to be recited in Turkish instead of the traditional Hebrew.
 While no reason was given for the decision, it is obvious that the intense nationalism which the small Turkish Jewish community.
 Recently a violent quarrel broke out between Jews who wanted Hebrew to be the language of instruction in the Jewish community schools and the faction of young nationalist Turkish Jews who insisted that Turkish replace Hebrew. When minor riots and fights broke out between the factions police intervened and arrested a number of the rioters.

164 British Firms Are at Levant Fair

Cunliffe-Lister Says Arrangements Are Being Made for Airport Near Tel Aviv
 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency)
 LONDON, April 23.—Colonel D. J. Cunliffe, Parliamentary Secretary for Overseas Trade, declared in the House of Commons today that 164 British firms are expected to be at the Levant Fair and that there were not enough room in the British pavilion to house all the British exhibits. Further authorities would house them in adjacent buildings.
 Barnett Janner, Jewish Member of Parliament who asked for the information, also asked what arrangements were being made for air transport to the Levant Fair. Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, British Secretary of State for Colonies, who replied, declared that arrangements were being made for the establishment of a temporary airport at Lydda, near Jaffa, and that it was hoped to have the airport ready for the opening of the Levant Fair.

Force, Falsehood 2 Bulwarks Of Nazism, Says Feuchtwanger

800 Murders in Reich Recorded in Second Brown Book

(The following excerpt is from Lion Feuchtwanger's contribution to the second Brown Book, "Dimitroff contre Goebbels").

By LION FEUCHTWANGER

The two principles upon which National Socialism stands are force and falsehood.

Upon the pages which follow you will find recorded 800 murders by National Socialists. There can be no doubt that this is but a part of the killings which the "Third Reich" effected.

What you will find in the lists which follow is not based upon conjecture. It is moreover nothing but a factual enumeration of those who were killed, the date of the killing, the place. It is a monotonous list, dull reading. Against the record, however, is the fanfare of lies by our opponents who truth looks very raw and sober. Instead of the grand ringing words which we find nothing but bare facts, figures, dates.

800 Murdered

Herr Hitler declared, for example, that in no country is personal so much respected as in Germany. He declared that the national revolution cost no more than fifty-one lives in all, and that these lives were sacrificed for the love of the nation.

LION FEUCHTWANGER

fore ask the German government how it is that only fifty-one of these murders were known to Hitler and what caused him to characterize these dead as racials. We call upon the German government to verify the statements in this line and to have the murderous acts which it enumerates investigated, one murder at a time, by uncorrupted judges. The German government will be very wary of this. Only by consistent, systematic lies can the government hold out; without its falsification apparatus it would go overnight. It is an exceptionally well built lying apparatus, built with a great deal of love, one must grant the National Socialists, executed with refinement to the last detail. Peace and order are foisted by every possible means. Whoever strolls along the Kurfurstendamm in Berlin, along the Jungfernstieg in Hamburg, or along the Hohenzollernstrasse in Cologne; whoever goes into the neighborhood of Garmlsen-Patenkirchen, sees nothing but peace and order.

Maintained By Violence

But this order will be maintained only by means of the acts of violence of the concentration camp, by means of ever recurring murders, as you will find recorded in the lists of this book. German peace and order is a lie. What those in power in the "Third Reich" do or leave undone is a lie; what they say and what they ignore is a lie. They get up with a lie and go to bed with it. Falsehood is their order, their law, their judgment, their German, their science, their right, their faith. Their National Socialism is a lie, and their Socialism. Only one thing is real: greed, their thirst for revenge, their brutality.
 And because it is so, because the foundation upon which these people build is falsehood, it is doubly necessary to undermine this foundation and constantly to contrast the kaleidoscopic lies of the National Socialists, with the hideous, bloody, actuality.

Polish Law Ask Friedmann Hits Jewish Bus Owners For Socialists

New Concession System Threatens Their Existence

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)

WARSAW, April 23.—The existence of hundreds of Jewish bus owners and drivers is threatened by a new order issued today by the Polish government introducing a government bus concession system.

Most of the Warsaw bus lines are already under the control of three large companies of the state bus system. Beginning June 1, all private bus owners will be forbidden to ply their customary routes.

Efforts are being made by Jewish communal officials to secure licenses for at least some of the Jewish bus owners who are to be prohibited from carrying on their occupation.

Under the concession system the Polish government will sell a monopoly on the right to the bus traffic to the highest or most favored bidder.

Bitter experience of the Polish Jews has proven that the Jews are seldom able to win the concessions.

Jewish Disabilities Corollary of Nazism, Roehm Tells Diplomats

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)

BERLIN, April 22.—Captain Ernst von Roehm, commander-in-chief of the Nazi storm troops and Minister without portfolio, who addressed a meeting of foreign journalists and foreign newsmen, in his speech said that the destruction of the "Jewish-German literature," numerous citations against the Jews, and the "emigration of inferior elements" were all natural corollaries of the Nazi revolution. He declared that it was "astonishing" to see with what indulgence the Nazis had treated their adversaries as compared with other revolutionists.

(Jewish Telegraphic Agency)

VIENNA, April 23.—The Jewish Telegraphic Agency learned today that the families of the four Jewish Social Democratic leaders, who were sent yesterday to the Woelsdorf concentration camp after having been arrested in Vienna since the crushing of the Social Democrats, have appealed to Dr. Seidler Friedmann, president of the Vienna Jewish community, to intervene with the government to make the lot of the prisoners easier.

The Jewish Socialists are Professors Karl Friedjung, Deputy Heinrich Allina, Councilor Friedrich Schleicher and Dr. Emil Maurer. Not only are they confined to the concentration camp for an indefinite period, but the families of the men are compelled to pay the Dollfus government more than a dollar a day for their maintenance.

All of them occupied prominent positions in the Vienna Socialist administration, but took no part in the actual fighting, since they were arrested as soon as the civil war began.
