HERMAN BERNSTEIN

Hitler Without Hitlerism? J. L. Garvin, the brilliant editor and publicist, in his latest article in the London Observer, analyzes the state of mind of the German people today with regard to Nazism. During the time that the article traveled to this country, the situation in Germany has grown more critical because of the planned mutiny against Hitler and the drastic manner in which it was crushed for the present.

Says Mr. Garvin:
"Today on the question of conscience Germany is split through and through. The -Protestants are riven by the grotesque neopaganism of jingo Christianty, while the Catholics to a man

Herr Rosenberg's mania for stenciling the swastika on every German mind is hopeless and ruinous. Unless Herr Hitler faces the elemen-Herr Hitler faces the elemen-tary facts; unless he learns the primary lesson of German his-tory for a thousand years; un-less he recognizes the spiritual conditions of political unity; un-less he makes up his mind to restore at any risk or cost com-puter liberty of convegence and restore at any risk or cost com-plete liberty of conscience and practice — unless he does these things he cannot by any possi-bility survive. His foundations will crumble beneath him, do what else he will."

And then he takes up the

Nazi Judophobia:

"Leaving aside all ethical and humane considerations, the Jewish persecution is economic im-becility. In all matters of international trade and credit that blunder has far-reaching effects, blunder has far-reaching effects, to Germany's detriment.

"No policy of religious or racial intolerance can prosper in the economic sphere. Modern Germany became richer because of her Jews. Old Spain impoversished itself by expelling them; just as France suffered by driving out the Huguenots. No trying out the Huguenots. No trying out the Huguenots with the spain of the Huguenots with the spain of the Huguenots. The spain of the Huguenots was the spain and the spain which was the spain of the anti-Semite. Mr. Garvin's conclusion is this:

East Side Resounds to Booms As Celebrants Observe July 4

With thousands scurrying from the tar-covered streets of New York to escape the intense heat yesterday, the usual July 4 cele-brations were somewhat lacking in fervor and enthusiasm.

The exodus from the city started early in the morning. Every means of transportation to seashores and parks were crowded with humanity. Down in the East Side, how-ever, celebrations were noisy and numerous.

American flags of every dimension, from the button-hole size to sion, from the nutton-nole size to the huge mast flag, were predomi-nant throughout the streets of the East Side. One pushcart peddler, selling fruit and pretzels, demon-strated his patriotism by display-ing both American and Hebrew

Back on the East Side celebra tions were going on apace, Kindhearted firemen opened street hy-drants and gushing streams of icy water played on happy, screaming children, who dressed themselves in their bathing suits and sat in front of the hydrants.

Streets resounded to the abrupt explosions of fire-crackers. A "four-incher" would be shot off, and soon a loud reply would come back from another explosion.

During the evening and night flashing Roman candles soared up to the clouds from crowded roof tops. Shouts of glee filled the

Open Hearings to Begin Drs. Ratnoff and Golub Sent by Hadassah to Palestine

Dr. Nathan Ratnoff, medical director of Beth Israel Hospital, and Dr. Jacob J. Golub, executive di-rector of the Hospital for Joint Diseases, sail on the "Berengeria" today for Palestine to select a site and draw up plans for the pro-posed Hadassah-University Hospital in Jerusalem.

The two physicians will make their recommendations at the request of Hadassah and the American Jewish Physicians' Commit-tee, sponsors of the new medical center. Dr. Golub is a member of the Hadassah medical reference board and Dr. Ratnoff is chairman of the American Jewish Physicians' Committee.

A campaign to raise $200,000 for the building fund of the hospital is now in progress here un-der the chairmanship of Mrs. Edward Jacobs. The new institution will supplant the present Hadas-sah-Rothschild Hospital in Jerusalem, which is said to be inac quate to meet the hospitalization needs of the growing city. The new hospital will be connected with the Hebrew University as a research institute and a graduate school of medicine.

Dr. Ratnoff and Dr. Golub will spect several sites in Jerusalem and its suburbs and, with the members of the site committee in Palestine, will select the one most suitable as a central hospital for Palestine.

The amendment, it was suggested, should be so stated so that the dues levied from merchants and industrialists should be from a half to one per thousand on the basis of the turnover tax. It was also suggested in the report that a commission should be appointed to maintain contact with the Min-ister of Education and Public Worship.

The new law, basing the dues on income, would turn the mem-bers of the Jewish community administrations into involuntary in-formers, to make the state aware of the amount of tax payable by each individual. ### Feinbloom Announces Device To Aid Sight of Partially Blind

Mirroscope Spectacle, Increasing Visual Acuity by 250 Percent, Employs New Principle-Invention Given to Science

(Special to the J.D.B.)
TORONTO, Ont., July 4.—Announcement of the Mirroscope Spectacle, an optical device which increases visual acuity by 250 per cent and employs a new principle cent and employs a new principle in optical science magnifying the vision of the partially blind be-yond that of any other known de-vice, was made here today by Dr. William Feinbloom of New York before the International Congress of the American Optometric Association.

Many people whose vision is now limited to the recognition of newspaper headlines can obtain distant vision at home, theatres, movies, church, athletic events and while riding in trains and automobiles, through the aid of the Mirroscope Spectacle, he stated.

For nine years, Dr. Feinbloom explained, he had been working on the problem of achieving that maximum magnification of vision for the near blind in a convenient form that could be worn like ordinary spectacles.

His discovery was made in re sponse to the need of those sub-normal vision patients who could not even recognize the faces about

This con-clusion is based on a report presented before the American Academy of Optometry at Balti-more last December, when Dr. Feinbloom reviewed 500 unselscted Feinbloom reviewed 500 unselscated cases of sub normal vision and showed that at least sixty per cent of these cases could be aided with some sub normal vision device.

Visible Field Large

In the Mirroscope Spectacle the physical axis of the objective and ocular are not co-incident, so that those people who see better from the side of their eyes can use the Mirroscope Spectacle without having to turn their eyes.

In explaining how the near blind can obtain longer working dis-tances for reading, bookkeeping and writing, Dr. Feinbloom said:

"It is because or the roug ...
ing distance obtainable by the ing distance obtainable by the Mirroscope Spectacle that the visible field is so large. Similarly, in working at a desk or in reading, it is now possible to secure normal reading distance. Thus, the patient can hold the newspaper twenty inches away and obtain a field of view the width of a stand-ard column."

Dr. Feinbloom, in discussing the history of the development of the Mirroscope Spectacle, expressed his appreciation for the assistance given him in its technical development by Dr. Elmer E. Hotaling, chairman of the Committee on Sub-Normal Vision of the American Academy of Optometry.

Gifts to Science Coupled with the announcement of this scientific discovery was Dr. Feinbloom's assertion that he was contributing the Mirroscope Spec-tacle to science. In December, 1932, Dr. Feinboum, who is a re-search fellow at Columbia Uni-versity Graduate School, announced the cylinder telescopic spectacle before the American Academy of Optometry in Chi-cago, and likewise presented it as a gift to the scientific world. He did similarly with five new optical inventions, among them the Microscopic Spectacle, when he re-ported on their discovery before the same body in Baltimore last December

Visiting optometrists from the United States, Canada and England were unanimous in agreeing that with Dr. Feinbloom's discovery the partially blind will have a new world of activity open to them. Dr. Thomas McBurnie, president of the American Optometri-cal Association, said:

Thanks of Humanity

"The science of optometry has always endeavored to conserve the eyesight of the people. The Mir-roscope, as another development within our profession will do much to improve the vision of many partially blind. Dr. Feinbloom de-serves the thanks of humanity."

Others who hailed Dr. Fein-bloom's achievement were: Dr. W. Jerome Heather of Chicago; Dr. E. C. Ebeling of St. Louis; Dr. F. Earle Cushing of Niagara Falls; Dr. Bernard A. Baer and Dr. Ed-win H. Silver of Washington; Dr. Briggs Palmer and Dr. Howard C. Loane of Boston; Dr. A. H. Tweedle of Hamilton, Ont.: Dr. J. A. McFee of Belleville, Ont.; Dr. J. A. McFee of Belleville, Ont.; Dr. E. While Hitler, after his interview with Mussolini, is ruthlessly fighting his enemies, both of the Right and the Left he who presched the Left, he who preached hate and unreason and rose to power on the wave of anti-Semitism cannot be trusted when, for the sake of self-preservation, he may declare that he is for reason and stability. A Hitler policy of moderation would hardly restore confidence in his regime abroad. His rabid Judophobia, in his speeches and his book, Mein Kampf, is too widely known in Germany as the principal part of the Nazi program. He has created an evil force that will destroy him. Convention Was Most Peaceful in History, Veterans Affirm

By M. IUSHEVITZ

(J.D.B. Staff Correspondent) ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 4 -In an atmosphere fairly exuding optimism and gratification at the remarkable recovery of the Zionist Organization of America, which doubled its membership in the last year and reduced a k getary deficit by $80,000, delegates to the thirty-seventh annual convention of the organization, which closed here late last night, unanimously adopted and pledged to carry through in the coming year an exceedingly ambitious program designed to secure the support of designed to secure the support of all American Jews; adopted a program of organizational changes calculated to increase to a maximum the efficiency of the organiz-ation and reaffirmed their faith in the mission of General Zionism and in the future of Palestine.

Characterized by veteran Zionists as the most peaceful conven-tion in the history of the organization, the gathering still had hec-tic, fighting sessions during which resolutions containing implied at-tacks on the Revisionist Zionist group for opposing the supremacy of the World Zionist Executive were heatedly debated.

Despite the fact that after the fighting on the floor of the convention was over, all the controversial resolutions including the one on the Stavsky case were passed unanimously, it was obvious that much bitter feeling had been engendered and that the lines of the Zionist political battle here. which will culminate next year in the election of delegates to the nineteenth World Zionist Con-gress, had been definitely laid.

Fuel Added to Fire Fuel to the smoldering fire of group and party antagonism, which here as in Europe and Palestine is shaking the Zionist move-ment to its very roots, was added by the brilliant, fighting speeches delivered by Jacob Fishman, New York editor, and by Berl Locker of London, Laborite member of the World Zionist Executive. Both speeches attacked the Revisionist group in the bitterest terms and Speaks to Soviet in fortright terms that the General Zionists, whose mission and place in the Zionist movement he defended, come out and support the Laborite position "100 per cent."

While neither speech was imwhile neither speech was im-plemented in the resolutions in-troduced, they were thoroughly discussed in the debate on other resolutions. It was evident from comment in the convention lobby and from the debate that many of the delegates were opposed to the views expressed by Mr. Fishman. In fact, a declaration protesting against the speech was signed by some sixty delegates, and was read to the convention, but the opposi-tion having no real issue on which to fight, faded out. That the pro-Laborite group in the convention was strong and would probably have won in a straight out-andout fight was indicated by the ap-plause during the debates and by the votes on the resolutions.

But the majority of the delegates seemed desirous of a reaf-firmation of the principles of General Zionism and a neutral stand, endorsing neither one faction or the other, but calling for the end of all internecine strife in the Zionist movement.

Politics Subordinated

The political struggle, however, was clearly subordinated this year to the consideration of measures involving the basic structure as well as the future of the Zionist movement in the United States.

Resolutions were adopted fol-lowing the speech on "The Future Program of the Zionist Organization of America" delivered by President Morris Rothenberg, making it possible to enroll Zion-ist "endorsers," who do not share the full Zionist viewpoint; granting funds to the education group to carry on Zionist education work among American Jewish youth; easing the path of organiza-tion. A series of resolutions was also adopted outlining a number of reforms in the regional and district Zionist organizations all over the country.

Russian Zionist Work

Probably the most interesting and unusual resolution adopted by the convention and which called upon the new Zionist administration to initiate conversations with Soviet leaders to the end that Russian Jewish Zionists might have speeches attacked the Revisions; asin Jewisa zionists migni nave group in the bitterest terms and freedom of expression in that 'litute to President Rothenberg, both called for the uputilding of Palestine on a national coopera-ity bazis. Mr. Rothenberg disclosed that while the Soviet officials had been noncommittal, their attitude coupled with the promise of Ambassador Bullitt to make a thor-ough investigation of the situation in the Soviet Union and to act accordingly, had encouraged the Zionist leaders to believe that much could be accomplished for Russian Jewry through negotia-

Seeks League Membership

Another resolution certain to create a stir in the Jewish world and in League of Nations circles called upon the Jewish Agency to initiate steps to secure the admis-sion of representatives of Jewish Palestine to the community of nations in the League of Nations.

Of equal importance with the resolution on the Soviet Jewish position was the resolution introduced at the close of the vitriolic attack on the immigration restricattack on the immigration restric-tions imposed by the Palestine government made by the veteran Zionist leader, Louis Lipsky. Pic-turing the tragic position of Euro-pean Jews beset by anti-Semitism, hatred and economic discrimina-tion, Mr. Lipsky told of the anxiety of these Law to find a broader. of these Jews to find a haven in Palestine, only to find the doors shut to them. He urged the con-vocation of an all-Jewish conference, consisting of representatives of all groups in American Jewry, to bring pressure to bear upon the mandatory power to open the gates of Palestine.

Role of U. S. Jews

Mr. Lipsky recalled the role of the American Jews at the end of the World War, when thanks to their intervention, minority rights were granted persecuted European Jews, and declared that a united American Jewry could influence the British government.

The resolution, unanimously adopted, called for the convocation of the all-Jewish conference not later than December, 1934.

later than December, 1934.
The convention also adopted a resolution calling for the continuation of the economic boycott against Nazi Germany until such time as the present regime was replaced with one willing to do "justice to the persecuted Jews of Germany."

The celebration of Palestine Day all over the United States to coinall over the United States to coincide with the week-end including November 2, the anniversary of the Balfour Declaration, was also decided upon by the convention. LONDON, June 20. — Although the available land in Palestine is limited, the entire problem of the country can be solved by allowing the other side of the Jordan to be settled, declared Lord Strabolgi, formerly Commander Kenworthy, M.P., at a meeting called by the Jewish Youth Organizations to protest against the restrictions on Jewish immigration into Palestine.

(J.T.A. Special Correspondence) BUCHAREST, June 20.—The Union of Rumanian Jews for Bukowina Province, during its visit to Czernowitz, submitted to the government cabinet a memorandum in which it presents its position on the new law for the protection of national labor.

The memorandum deals with the question of the economic distress of the Jews in Bukowina towns. In the economic crists, which has hit Bukowina hardest, it says, Bukowina Jews suffer most. Distress and unemployment are ramtress and unemployment are ram-pant. Bukowina is the most im-poverished part of Rumania, and the Jews are the poorest of the poor, especially in the towns, where the intellectuals are utterly destitute. Shirley Temple's Hot Weather I shouldn't like to create the idea that I am forward or the kind of person who insists upon impressing his view upon one, but I must say that the weather last weekend was a trifle warm. In fact, some of my friends were brutally frank in expressing their opinion of the temperature. Gentlemen whose livelihood comes from the theatre were most active in their disgust with the weather and after visiting some of Broadand after visiting some of Broad-way's picture houses I can't blame them. However, there was one house, to wit—The Roxy, which seemed not at all affected by the humidity, and the reason was a little five-year-old actress named Shirley Temple, whose latest picture, "Baby Take a Bow," is play-ing at that over-decorated and very gilted barn.

What effect this type of promo-tion will have in a country where the mythical "man in the street" is equipped with elementary facts of history and not a little common sense, remains to be seen Small disturbances at previous eetings also failed to make an impression on the British public. What with Hyde Park, industrial unrest, and so on, the country was rather used to them. whole scandal, so far as a sociallyminded observer is concerned is that no one, or hardly anyone, among the many who have entered among the many who have entered the post-mortem controversy, is showing any alarm about the evi-dence of the ugly and alarming growth of the Fasciat movement. Time and again in recent years the "red" and other "menaces" were at suitable times dangled be-fron the growing mentages. fore the gaping populace.

But the most distressing element discovered to date by the heated debaters in England is what one of them terms "the militarization of politics." Exception is taken to of pointies. Exception is taken to political factions maintaining "armies" in uniform, with rigid discipline, application of the latest methods of "warfare," and all the trimmings.

The attitude appears to be that Fascism is a "jolly" respectable business if only blackjacks refrain from public appearances, if the goosestep does not resound on London pavements. The ideological poison seems to be overlooked entirely for the time being, anyway.

Legalization of Polish Jewish ArtisansSought

Group Formed to Aid Unregistered Workers for New Law

(J.T.A. Special Correspondence) WARSAW, June 20.—A United Committee for Jewish Artisanship

has been formed here, comprising representatives of the Joint Distribution Committee the Tcs Ort. Central Jewish Artisans Union, and the Jewish Cooperative Societies, to undertake action to legalize the unregistered Jewish artisan workshops that now exist, and which will have to close when the recently revised Industrial (Guild) Law of 1927 enters into effect on August 15, unless they have in the meanwhile been registered.

Thousands of Jewish artisans were for several reasons unable to adjust themselves to the require-ments of the Guild Law, and for that reason did not take out the necessary papers, with the conse-quence that their workshops were counted in the category of illegal workshops. The revised industrial law adopted a few months back by the Sejm created new difficulties for this class of illegal artisans for this class of illegal artisans, and if they do not legalize their position within the next few months, they will be thrown into the ranks of the unemployed.

Enlightenment Sought

The committee is therefore startng a campaign to enlighten these artisans with regard to their rights and duties, and it will afford them legal aid to enable them to carry out the necessary formalities for legalizing their artisan workshops, The committee will seek to rous public opinion on the question. It will establish local committees in will establish local committees in the provinces which will carry on legalization work. The legal com-mission of the committee will shortly publish details, clarifying snortly publish details, clarifying the position of the Jewish artisans under the newly amended indus-trial law, and giving them prac-tical suggestions how to act, in order to obtain their legalization by August 15.

The committee is arranging series of lectures intended for the social workers in the big towns, who will have to engage locally in organizing the work.

So that we usually discuss essential matters—and in brief.

This Russian friend lives in Len ingrad. He is a wood engraver by trade, by craft and by art. What he does is to cut pictures, so to speak, into blocks of wood with speak, into blocks or wood with certain knife-like tools, but those blocks, even after he's cut into them, have no particular existence in art until he has inked them and in art until he has inked them and pulled proofs from the inked blocks. Each sheet of paper thus treated is called a print, or proof, and the average person can't tell how good an artist's blocks are until they have been 'proved,' so to speak. In other words, a wood-block artist, needs words, a wood-block artist, needs words, a wood-block artist, needs words, a woodblock artist needs paper no less than wood and the quality of paper is only slightly less important than the quality of wood into which the pictures are cut.

Most woodblock artists—so far as I know—prefer Japanese rice paper. At least my Russian friend es and, blandly, I undertook the mmission of sending from New York to Leningrad a small package of Japanese paper cut into apage of Japanese paper cut into ap-proximately six by ten inch sizes. I purchased at the wholesale rate $2.38 worth of paper and had it packed up, sealed, tagged, ad-dressed. It was almost a morning's work preparing that small package in a manner which would make it acceptable to the postal authorities, and saw it off four thousand mile journey with something of the anxiety with which an ancient shipper must have sent off a cargo on the un-

A month passed and a letter arrived which yielded the astonish-ing information that when the package containing $2.38 worth of Japanese paper arrived in Lenine paper arrived in Leningrad the person to whom it was addressed was summoned to the post office or wherever such things re done in Leningrad, and ask to hand over, as customs duty, the sum of one hundred and twenty rubles which, according to the legal exchange, comes to more than twenty-five times the price of the paper itself. My friend made every legitimate effort to acquire his little package duty free, but for very good Soviet reasons, reasons of state, or of economic policy, or pique or re-venge, or whatever they may be, his petition was denied, and the package was made to retrace every step in its four-thousand-mile journey, back to its source, namely, myself.

Miss Tufverson and I

ISS Agnes Tufverson, whose strange and still unsolved disappearance has been agitating the police of New York and Vienna, was a fellow-tenant in the apartment house in which I live. Her apartment was two floors below and we must have gone up, or down, together at some the passenger elevator. We mean nothing to each other and I have not, much as I regret it, the slightest recollection of her after all, the human thing to want to say that one knew, or was ac-quainted with, people who are touched by tragedy, or romance, or good fortune. The names of Miss Tufversor and Captain Poderjay had been on the front pages for more than a week before I became aware of the fact that she had been a fellow-tenant. I had seen quite a number of policemen about the house, but attached no importance to their presence, and of course I did not recognize the plain-clothesmen who came and went, for how is a fellow to know that a man in ordinary clothes is really a policeman in disguise?

a ponceman in disgusse? I became aware of Miss Tuf-verson's fellow-tenancy one Sun-day morning when the elevator man asked me: "Did you see my name in the paper today." I an-swered I had not, and why was it in the paper? "They called me Miss Tufverson's favorite elevator." operator." "Is that so?" I said and thought no more about it. But after that I followed the Tufverson case with more interest and kept in touch with the confusing ramifications.

Enterprise

One afternoon, returning home, One afternoon, returning home, I found an old newspaper acquaint-ance downstairs. For a moment I thought that he had recently moved in but it appeared he had been sent out on the Tufverson case and could I give him any information? I couldn't, and two days later I heard of another newspaper man, a fellow-tenant this one, who had attempted to break into the Tufverson apart-ment with a pass-key, but had failed. But although my connection with the Tufverson case was tenu-ous enough to be non-existent, I did not suspect that I was going to be put on the spot, so to speak, that my morale was to be undermined

It started one morning when I was going down the elevator, when the operator lurched in my TXTO O direction with an accusing finge and cried: "Where's the body?" was calm and at ease that morning and I laughed good-humoredly laughed without starting, for elevator operators will be elevator operators. But the second time that accusing finger and the question "Where's e body?" were suddenly launched at me, I was a little discomfited, and I rather wished the operator would play some other game. But the third and fourth time the accusing question was hurled at me I started in fright, to all intents like a guilty person. And I know very well if our operator continues third-degree tactics I'll have to tell all I know. There is no particular moral in this, except that the operator's innocent fun and my own reactions to his play give me a sympathetic notion of how a third degree tactician can succeed in wearing down the resistance even of an innocent persons into a confession of guilt by Federal funds, Dr. Frank A. ### Retention Seen as Victory for Conservative Element in Reich

(Continued from Page One) -Hitler, it was believed, at first desirous of having von Papen out of the cabinet, later wanted to keep him in the government as commissioner for the Saar, wh von Papen's non-Nazi affiliation could be emphasized in the cam paign preceding the plebiscite. It is understood that you Papen was not agreeable to this and that if he were to go out of the government, he would go out en-tirely. But the decision, apparently, did not rest with either Hitler or von Papen. President Paul von Hinden-burg had the final say. Although approving cordially every step taken by Hitler and Goering in the ruthless suppression of opposi-tionist elements, the aged Presi-dent, who had warned Hitler that the Reichswehr had been made responsible for von Papen's safety, evidently insisted that the man whom he called "dear comrade" whom he called "dear comrane" must remain in the government. That is the only interpretation that can be put on the unexpected announcement tonight following Hitler's return from a conference with von Hindenburg at Neudeck and further discussions trusted advisers here today.

Victory for Conservatives When Hitler left Berlin last when Hitler left Berlin last night by airplane, it was, on the best authority, to secure von Hin-denburg's permission to dismiss the man considered the President's representative in the government. It was confidently predicted that this permission would be forthcoming, particularly in view of von Hindenburg's fulsome approval of the steps taken by Hitler in his bloody cleansing of hostile elements.

Von Papen's retention in the cabinet must, therefore, be considered a victory for the conser-vative elements that have been alarmed by the direction in which the Nazi regime had been taking the German nation.

It signified also that Hitler recognizes the authority of von Hin-denburg and that his future course will have to meet with the approclass he most closely representsespecially so since Hitler must depend on the Reichswehr, the standing army, because of the undepend-ability of his storm troop army revealed by the developments of last Saturday and subsequent days.

Storm Troops Out

It is now expected that the great majority of the storm troops, now on a month's vacation, will not be recalled, and that the government will take every step possible liquidate the stormers' organ organization as painlessly and definitely as

Once this step is taken, Hitler ill be completely at the dictate of the conservatives, retaining his office only by virtue of their ac-quiescence. That they will not readily depose him is believed due to von Hindenburg's conviction that Hitler alone stands between Germany and chaos.

A whole detachment of storm troopers, it was learned today, had been placed in a concentration camp for protesting against Hit-ler's "purging" of the storm troopers and execution of popular lead-against a "hysterical cry for united action," and indicated "the tendency which is already appar-ent among certain types of Jewish leaders to exploit this for their own purposes,"

The Hitler boycott was termed L unreliable weapon in defeating anti-Semitism in a paper of Dr. Solomon Grayzel, instructor of Jewish History at the Gratz Col-lege of Philadelphia. Read in his absence, the paper stated that "the boycott as an organized and purposeful weapon with which to bring an enemy to the Jews to his bring an enemy to the Jews to his knees is, to say the least, not a reliable weapon. It certainly of-fers no means for a permanent solution to the problem of recur-rent anti-Jewishness," he said. "An individual and unorganized boycott is human and understandable; an organized one smacks of the uncivilized. Moreover, no minority can afford to resort to force. Even if this boycott against Nazi Germany, aided as it is by a great variety of other economic forces, succeeds, I doubt that we will ever again be in a position to use the boycott as a weapon."

The solution of the problem, he said, is for the Jews to direct their efforts against "the evils which beset human life, and against the chains which trammel it."

Speaking in the same spirit, Dr. Israel Goldstein of New York City declared that "only by a re-adjustment of our economic order can face conflicts be solved," adding that "perhaps they can never be solved entirely but they can cartainly be reduced to the irreducible minimum."

Jewry Mourns Death of Poet: Vienna Rabbis Pay Respects

Chaim standing contemporary Hebrew poet, was born on January 9, 1873, at Rady, Wolhynia. His father was a poor store keeper and some-thing of a scholar. When Chaim was only a few years old the family moved to Zhitomir, where the father died in 1880, leaving his family in very reduced circum-stances. Chaim, by nature a lively child, was placed in the care of his grandfather, a fanatically pious man who punished the child se-verely for the slightest mischief, and kept him from orming any childhood friendships.

Bialik's aptitude for learning and literature became apparent when he was but twelve years old. He was particularly impressed by the Cabala and Chassidic liters ture, which served as rich food for his poetic imagination. At thirteen he left the cheder to study by himself. Shortly thereafter he went to the Yeshiva at Wolozhin, where he stayed but a short time, gathne stayed but a short time, gath-ering, however, many lasting im-pressions there, studying Hebrew literature and the ideas of Achad Haam and Yehuda Leib Gordon. Bialik's first poem, "To the Spring Died" house the time and the stayed of the spring Bird," belongs to this period.

At Wolozhin, seized with a great desire for worldly learning, Bialik learned Russian. Then he went to Odessa to further his studies. At Odessa he suffered from financial embarrassment, and after death of his grandfather, in 1901 was forced to return to Zhitomir to seek some means of earning a living. He tried various things, including teaching Hebrew and dealing in timber.

Founded Moriah Group Through the occasional printing of a poem in various Hebrew publications his name became popular in Hebrew literary circles and Bia lik was invited to settle in Odessa where in 1905 he became co-founder, with Alter Gutman and I. H. Ravnitzky (S. Ben Zion), of the Moriah publishing group, which played a considerable part in the development of modern Hebrew literature and pedagogy.

In 1903, after the first Kishi-ew pogrom, Bialik visited that city and wrote the famous Story of Nemirow, so called to avoid Russian consorship. Actually it was a story of the pogrom kill-ings. The Story of Nemirow proved the cornerstone of Bialik's fame.

After the October revolution Bialik suffered great hardships at Odessa, nearly losing his life. Dur-ing this period Bialik was erroneously reported dead. Through the intervention of Maxim Gorki he finally succeeded in obtaining per-mission to leave Odessa. Bialik spent several lays in Hamburg and Berlin, then departed for Palestine in 1924.

Bialik was a poet, essavist, literary critic and journalist in Yiddish as well as in Hebrew, in which language the greater part of his work was written. His debut in Yiddish was in the form of a children's poem, one of the most fa-mous of which is Unter die Grininke Boimelach. Bialik also translated a number of his Hebrew masterpieces into Yiddish. He also worked on a number of Yiddish translations of the older Hebrew writers and of the Bible, and ren dered many of the Yiddish writers into Hebrew.

Received by Coolidge

Bialik was married in 1893. With his wife he visited the United States in 1926, primarily in the interests of the United Palestine Appeal. During that visit he was re-ceived by President Coolidge, and was tendered a reception at the University of Pennsylvania where University of Pennsylvania, whore the Processor Laurie of the Department of English characterized him as the "Wordsworth of Zewish Literature." A celebration scheduled in Berlin at the time was cancelled at the last moment because police feared a Nazi Storm Troop attack would be made upon the Jews returning from the meeting.

Translated into English Many descriptive terms, most of them superlatives, have been used to characterize Bialik the poet, whose works have been translated into many tongues. Maurice Sam-uel and Philip M. Raskin, himself der and Philip M. Raskin, himself a poet and editor of an anthology of modern Jewish poetry, have rendered Bialik into English. The latter once described the man as the greatest of contemporary Jewish ish writers. Raskin's enthusiasm for Bialik
