JORDAN MEMBERS OF ARMISTICE COMMISSION OUTLINE CONDITIONS FOR PEACE WITH ISRAEL

TEL AVIV, Aug. 14. (JTA) -- The conditions under which Jordan is willing to conclude permanent peace with Israel were outlined today in a broadcast over the British-controlled Near East Arabic Radio in Cyprus.

The broadcast said that the Jordan delegation to the mixed armistice commission believes that peace would be possible if Israel returns Jaffa and a section of Lydda to the Arabs, reopens the Jerusalem-Bethlehem road in exchange for Jordan's reopening the road from Jerusalem to Mt. Scopus, pays compensation to Arab refugees who fled from territory now belonging to Israel and restitutes the Ruttenberg power station to the Arabs.

An Israel military spokesman confirmed today that a clash took place between an Israel military patrol and a band of Arab smugglers northeast of Beersheba last Wednesday night. He said ten smugglers were killed, ten were captured and three older men were handed over to the Arab Legion.

The smuggling band was divided into four groups, the spokesman said. He added that the Arabs were proceeding from Egypt to Jordan when they were intercepted in Jewish territory by a border patrol. The Israelis confiscated the smugglers' goods, which included large quantities of cotton, primus stoves, lamps and a large number of gold sovereigns.

About 85,000 claims still remain unsettled, they reported.

ENGLISH-JEWISH NEWSPAPERS ASSN. HITS "UNETHICAL TACTICS" IN ADVERTISING SOLICITING

DETROIT, Aug. 14. (JTA) -- The American Association of English-Jewish Newspapers, in a strongly-worded statement released today, calls the attention of all American Jewish communities to "unethical and scandalous tactics" charged against a number of publications calling themselves "national magazines" in solicitation of advertising, and warns that continuation of such practices will harm the existing newspapers. In several instances, important national organizations which publish some of the guilty periodicals share in the accusations.

The publishers of newspapers affiliated with the American Association of English-Jewish Newspapers charge in their statement that national organizations have been "duped" by irresponsible solicitors to submit to a scheme which involves the clipping of advertisements from issues of English-Jewish newspapers--particularly holiday editions; the mailing of copies of such advertisements to the advertisers, giving the impression that they appeared in the columns of the magazines in whose behalf the solicitations are made; the attaching of a bill to the ads asking for immediate payment for them, in one case giving the advertiser five days in which to reject the ad, else making himself responsible for its use.

"These shocking practices have outraged not only Jewish advertisers but also non-Jews who have called our member newspapers to express their resentment," the statement says. "One magazine was told by an advertiser that he is interested in supporting only the local newspapers. In many instances the attitude of 'a plague on both your houses' has resulted in direct harm to the English-Jewish weekly newspapers which are constantly called upon to render services to the very organizations which now seek to stab them in the back by their unethical practices.

"The American Association of English-Jewish Newspapers has made a sincere effort to avoid a scandal," the statement continues. "We have called this matter to the attention of the National Community Relations Advisory Council, and we hope that the N.C.R.A.C. will be strong enough to solve this internal problem. We have prevailed upon our member newspapers not to turn the matter over to their respective Business Bureaus and to the U.S. Postal authorities. But we are forced to make this public statement in our own columns and through the Jewish Telegraphic Agency in order that responsible Jews--advertisers and those who are concerned that the highest Jewish ethical values should be enforced--should not be misled by irresponsible solicitors."

The statement is signed by Philip Slomovitz, president of the Association and editor of The Detroit Jewish News; Elias Jacobs, publisher, Buffalo Jewish Review, and Jacques Back, editor, Nashville Observer, secretaries; Leo H. Frisch, publisher, Minneapolis Jewish World, treasurer; Robert S. Gamsey, editor, Denver Jewish News; Irving G. Rhodes, publisher, Wisconsin Jewish Chronicle; A. Slabot, Jewish Ledger, New Orleans, La.; Myer Keléman, B'nai B'rith Messenger, Los Angeles. It also has the endorsement of seven other members of the Association's executive committee and an additional 23 affiliated publishers.
